PITEOUS BLEATS WILL BE EMITTED BY WOOL GROWERS

In an Effort to Prevent the Democrats From Revising Schedule K of Tariff.

GROWERS PLAN TO MARCH ON WASHINGTON IN FORCE

But Chairman Underwood Says the Wool Men Might Just as Well Make an Assault on Gibraltar as on House Democrats---Joe Cannon Objects to Being Placed Near Ice Box.

Washington, March 26.—Members of the ways and means committee of the house of representatives are not much exercised by the announcement that western wool growing interests are preparing to march upon Washington in force when the tariff question is considered.

"While I have no authority to say that wool growers will not be given a hearing," said Chairman Underwood, "it is my opinion that they might just as well make an assault upon Gibraltar as upon the house. We know now all the arguments that will be advanced against the revision of schedule K, but there is no question about what the house will do. We will make our revision and send it to the senate, and whether it goes any further remains to be seen."

Seniority Rule for Chairmanships.

The comment made by Mr. Underwood reflects the attitude of the majority of the ways and means committee and the leaders of the new democratic house. Acting as a committee on committees the members of the ways and means committee have practically completed their labors. There has been a great deal of speculation about the chairmanships, and the general impression is that in general the seniority rule has been followed, but as the lists prepared are all subject to change in the democratic caucus to be held next Saturday, there will be no official announcement made of the proposed organization until then. Possibly it will be the judgment of the caucus that all of the committees should not be organized immediately, and this is an additional reason why the ways and means committee is trying to keep secret the result of its labors.

No action has been taken by the republican minority concerning committees. The republicans will have one-third of the membership of each committee, and it is probable that most of the important places will be filled by men who are now the ranking members. It is likely that a place on the appropriations committee will be given to Mr. Cannon, who was chairman of that committee prior to his elevation to the speakership.

Cannon Objects to Ice Box.

When democratic leaders heard there was a movement on the part of the standpat republicans to make Mr. Cannon the minority leader of the house, it was assumed he would be given

ULRICH JUSTIFIED, SAYS WASHINGTON

Negro Takes Another View of Assault.

After Reflection, Washington Decides Ulrich Was Justified and That Any Other Man in Similar Circumstances Would Have Done the Same.

Philadelphia, March 26.—(Special.)—Booker T. Washington, the negro educator who was attacked and beaten up in New York last Sunday night after it had been charged he was prowling around the hallway of 16½ West Sixty-third street and for which alleged attack Albert Ulrich, a resident of the apartment house, has waived a preliminary hearing, today emphatically declared that he believed Ulrich was justified in attacking him under the circumstances.

After making this admission, Washington intimated that all future proceedings against Ulrich would be dropped, but declared this was a matter to which his lawyers would attend and he could not be sure that they would allow him to retire from the prosecution.

What Washington Says.

"In looking upon the attack after seven days from its occurrence," said Washington, "I believe that Mr. Ulrich was justified in attacking not only me, but any other man under similar circumstances. I was in the hall of the house and was peering at the name plates on the doors in an effort to find one of my business acquaintances. After the charges had been brought I learned that Ulrich had a daughter and that several efforts had been made to kidnap her. There seems to be little doubt but that Ulrich thought I might be a kidnaper. If he did he was perfectly justifiable in attacking me. No man could have done otherwise under the circumstances. I have no personal feeling against Mr. Ulrich. To my mind he did the manly thing."

"But will you continue the prosecution?" Washington was asked.

Not Peering Through Keyholes.

"That is something I cannot answer. The whole matter is in the hands of my attorneys. They may feel that the case should go to the end to prove that I was not peering through keyholes as has been intimated."

Washington spent today here as the guest of John S. Durham, a negro lawyer. He also delivered an address at the Broad Street Theater on "The moral development of the race; Obstacles and progress."

He was very cordially received and in the course of his address declared that the negro was an absolute necessity to the white man and that they must take their places side by side and co-operate.

Washington Hates No Man.

In closing his address Washington said: "Never until the last few days did I know I had so many warm, earnest, devoted friends among the white people of the north and south, not to mention the hosts of those of my own race. It has left me with a new feeling for all my fellowmen and better than ever before I can say I have hatred for no man."

NEGROES EXPRESS CONFIDENCE IN BOOKER T. WASHINGTON.

New York, March 26.—At a mass meeting of more than 500 negroes in the Bethel African Methodist Episcopal church today, resolutions were adopted expressing confidence in and affection for Dr. Booker T. Washington, the negro educator, who recently was injured during an encounter with Albert Ulrich, a white man, in this city. President Taft was warmly praised for writing his letter of sym-

SAMUEL GOMPERS REACHES ATLANTA

Will Speak at Taft Hall Tonight.

Leaders of American Federation of Labor Will Arrange for Next National Convention in Atlanta---Entertained by Officers of Atlanta Federation.

Samuel Gompers, president of the American Federation of Labor, and the most noted labor leader in the civilized world today, reached Atlanta yesterday morning for the purpose of making preparation for the national convention of the federation next November. He will be in Atlanta only today and tonight, and will leave the city tomorrow morning.

Tonight at 8 o'clock Mr. Gompers will deliver an address at Taft hall, on "The Aims, Purposes and Accomplishment of the American Federation of Labor."

While in the city he will be entertained by officers and members of the local Federation of Trades.

Mr. Gompers was met at the Terminal station Sunday morning by Jerome Jones, editor of The Journal of Labor; Claude H. Ashley, N. H. Kirkpatrick and J. W. Bridwell, who escorted him and his party to the New Kimball.

Mr. Gompers' Party.

With Mr. Gompers are Frank Morrison, secretary of the American Federation of Labor; James A. Short, president of the building trades department of the federation; Thomas F. Tracy, secretary and treasurer of the union label trades department of the federation.

Mr. Gompers and his party have come to Atlanta to make arrangements for the big national convention which will take place in November, beginning on the 13th. Four days before the federation convenes there will be a convention of the union label trades department; and after the federation adjourns there will be a meeting of the building trades department, which will hold a session lasting one week. There will also be a meeting of the metal trades department. Altogether the conventions will hold meetings in Atlanta lasting nearly four weeks.

This morning Mr. Gompers will make arrangements to secure a printing office to publish the daily proceedings of the national convention. He will also arrange with the various hotels for the accommodation of the delegates to the convention.

This afternoon Mr. Gompers and party will be entertained by several of the leading labor men of the city at the Forsyth theater matinee.

Will Speak Tonight.

At 8 o'clock tonight Mr. Gompers will deliver his address at Taft hall, which has been specially decorated for the occasion.

Seated on the stage will be Samuel Gompers, president A. F. of L.; Frank Morrison, secretary A. F. of L.; James A. Short, president of building trades; Thomas Tracy, secretary label department; Mayor Courtland S. Winn, N. H. Kirkpatrick, president Atlanta Federation of Trades; Jerome Jones, chairman, and J. W. Bridwell, secretary convention committee; Rev. E. D. Ellenwood, Hon. A. P. Stewart, C. T. Ladson, attorney Atlanta Federation of Trades; Hon. Hoke Smith, Claude Ashley, John M. Slaton, O. A. Cone, Hon. Andrew Calhoun, William Van Houten, Louis Gholstin, J. M. Shearer, Hon. James L. Mayson, Hon. Robert F. Maddox, Carl Karston, Walter Taylor, E. W. Martin, Mr. Gunnell, Arthur Ardery, E. E. Pomeroy, S. B. Marks, F. A. Marston, Major J. D. Dunwoody, William Robinson and F. A. Quillian.

He Looks the Leader.

Mr. Gompers is a man of striking appearance, and at the very first glance one can see that he has in his make-up the qualifications required of a leader. He is short and thick-set, with a large head on very broad shoulders. His iron-gray hair is thin almost to baldness. It is the keen, far-seeing eyes of the man, and the slow, deliberate manner in which he speaks that hold attention. If some men think twice before they speak, Mr. Gompers thinks thrice. He often begins to speak, then stops and thinks before he continues. Although his manner is that of a man who is thoughtful and sedate, he nevertheless likes a good joke, and is altogether a "jolly good companion."

He stands as the head and leader of an organization that now numbers over two million members, and which has been increasing at the rate of twenty-five or thirty thousand members a month. For twenty-eight years he has been the president of the federation, ever since he was 43 years of age—

DUNCAN M'RAE DIES A HERO; GEORGIA BOY IS DROWNED AFTER SAVING 3 COMRADES

Washington, March 26.—The body of Duncan McRae, Jr., who was drowned in the Potomac river yesterday, while canoeing with fellow students of George Washington university, was recovered today. McRae lost his life after having heroically saved the lives of three of his fellow students—Harold Keats, Reamer W. Argo and Robert L. Jones.

McRae was 21 years old, a son of Colonel Duncan McRae, of Macon, Ga., and a nephew of Major James H. McRae, U. S. A., of the war college in Washington.

MAGAZINES TO GO AS FAST FREIGHT

Other Bulky Periodicals to Go in Similar Way.

Hitchcock Has Decided on This Method of Transporting Bulky Mail Matter to Save Transportation Charges---Distributing Terminals Established.

Washington, March 26.—Magazines and other bulky periodicals, after July 1, next, will be transported by the postoffice department in carload as fast freight.

Postmaster General Hitchcock is developing as rapidly as possible plans which he decided upon last December to utilize fast freight in the transportation of magazines when practicable and in instances where a saving to the government in transportation charges may be effected.

"The plans I have decided upon," said Mr. Hitchcock this evening, "are not proposed as a solution of the pending controversy over the suggested increase of the second-class mail rates on the advertising sections of mhagazines, but they probably will tend to bring about a solution of that question the more easily."

Quadrennial Weighing of Mails.

The quadrennial weighing of the mails in the third contract section of on the advertising sections of maga- Illinois, Michigan, Wisconsin, Minnesota, Iowa and Missouri, is now in progress.

By direction of the postmaster general, given in accordance with his plans for transporting periodical mail by fast freight, the weights of monthly and semi-monthly periodical mail matters, originating in large publishing centers, are being taken and kept separate from the weights of other mails. The great publishing centers are Boston, Springfield, Mass., New York, Philadelphia and Chicago.

From July 1, next, periodicals that can be transported in carload lots by fast freight through the section, weighed without disadvantage in delivery, will be carried in this manner and paid for at freight rates. The weights of the periodicals taken during the present quadrennial weighing will be excluded from the basis of adjustment of transportation pay for the four-year term of the railways affected.

PEACE IN SIGHT FOR MEXICANS

That Is the Opinon Held at Washington.

Believed That Diaz's New Cabinet Will at Once Open Negotiations With the Revolutionists---Diaz Said to Be Anxious to Treat for Peace.

Washington, March 26.—With the departure tonight for Mexico City of Francisco Leon de la Barra, the Mexican ambassador to the United States, who yesterday was appointed minister of foreign affairs in the new cabinet of President Diaz, official Washington believes the initial stage of an era of peace in Mexico has been inaugurated.

President Taft and Secretary of State Knox, as well as the members of the diplomatic corps who have evinced keen interest on behalf of their countries in the developments of the Mexican situation, it is known, share this belief.

De La Barra's Mission Significant.

Minister de la Barra's mission to Mexico, in the face of present conditions in that country, is regarded here as the most significant occurrence in the Mexican situation since Senor Jose Yves Limantour, minister of finance, conferred in New York with Francisco Madero, Sr., and Gustave A. Madero, father

WOMEN CRAZED, MEN IN PANIC

Harrowing Details of the Alapaha Disaster.

H. A. Longshore Gives Graphic Description of the Wreck, Telling of the Heroism of Two Passengers and Marvellous Escape of the Engineer.

Harrowing details of the wreck which ditched the "Dixie Flyer" at Alapaha early Saturday morning have been brought to the city by H. A. Longshore, an Atlantan, who was on the ground within a short time after the wreck had occurred. Mr. Longshore reached the city Sunday morning, the first actual witness of the wreck to appear in Atlanta.

"I have seen a number of railroad wrecks," said Mr. Longshore, "but this was the most horrible sight I was ever called upon to witness. I hope I shall never again see depicted the misery and suffering and despair I found all around me the moment I reached the scene, which was in a short time after the wreck occurred.

Had to Hold Women.

"Everywhere were women crying and screaming and praying. Many of them had husbands or other relatives still pinned under the wreck dead or alive, and in many instances it was found necessary to place a burly negro on either side of them to prevent their rushing under the wreck which was in danger of falling.

"The majority of the men were little, if any, more collected than the women. They were running everywhere as though crazed, calling loudly for their loved ones or acquaintances, too panic-stricken to be of any material assistance in getting those pinned under the wreck out.

"There were two notable exceptions to this, however. I have forgot the names of the two men, if I ever knew them, but there were two who did noble work in their efforts not only to rescue the hapless victims, but to alleviate the suffering as much as possible. I think one man's name was Wooten. He was from Chicago. The other fellow was from Louisville, and both displayed remarkable courage under the trying circumstances.

Engineer's Miraculous Escape.

"I talked to Engineer Green, who expressed the belief that it was only an act of Providence that he was not killed. He states that when the driving rod broke, the negro fireman had just climbed into his seat after filling the engine with coal. The break occurred on the fireman's side of the engine, and as the rod crashed through the air the first time, it struck the fireman's head and shoulder hurling him headlong from the cab.

"The engineer made a grab for his air-brake lever, but before he had time to use it, he, too, was thrown headlong through his own window. As he was passing out, however, he managed to grab the window sill with his left hand and here he hung while the engine continued its wild flight over the trestle. When this was crossed he released his hold and dropped in safety to the ground.

"Engineer Green said that he believed his escape an act of Providence. His engine was reeling from side to side of the trestle, he said, and he thought every moment it would fall his way and crush him under it. In the short seconds he was hanging by one hand, he offered up a prayer for his life to be spared, and he believes his escape came in answer to this prayer.

Great Timbers Cut.

"The terrific force with which the broken driving rod was being hurled through the air may be judged when I tell you that I myself saw the end of a beam 12 inches square, which was broken squarely off by one blow of the terrible flail, as it whirled wildly about the moving engine. In another instance, the rod struck the four large supports under one of these cross pieces and literally demolished the tops of all four.

"The trestle, which is quite a long one, was literally torn to pieces from the point where the driving rod broke. It is almost impossible to see how so much damage might have been done by a rod so small in comparison, no matter with what speed it was revolving.

Many Looters Present.

"The horror of the scene and the pressing need for assistance in the rescue work did not prevent the looters getting in their work. Within a few moments after I reached the scene, a man was caught cutting open a mail

CHARRED BODIES OF GIRL VICTIMS VIEWED BY 200,000

Long Lines of People Pass Through Temporary Morgue Searching for Loved Ones.

IMPOSSIBLE TO IDENTIFY MANY OF CHARRED VICTIMS

Sometimes a Ring or Other Trinket Tells the Identity of the Victim---Lot of Money on the Bodies---One of the Girls Had $800 in Her Stocking.

New York, March 26.—What will go down in history as the fire disaster of Washington Square entered upon its aftermath today, with 82 of nearly 150 victims identified. The official death list has been lessened rather than increased.

Revised count shows 141 dead tonight, with 12 women and girls at death's door in the hospitals. All told, 150 will perhaps conservatively cover the casualties when those whose horrible hurts and burns seem fatal shall have joined their fellow workers now in pine coffins in the morgue.

Careful counting still rates the feminine victims, young and old, at approximately ten to every one masculine. Broadly speaking, they were Israelites and Italians, living either on the East Side or in a small Italian quarter near the scene of the fire.

Nearly all of the dead were under thirty ears of age, the large majority between 17 and 22. Many were only 16 and a few 15 years old.

Investigating the Disaster.

With all the dead removed from the building, the coroner began an investigation into the disaster—one of several inquiries which could be conducted by city departments—aided by agents from the district attorney's office.

An inquest will be held, and its result will be placed before the grand jury. Many grand jurymen visited the scene, and District Attorney Whitman announced that those responsible for the loss of life would be rigorously prosecuted. On Thursday night a mass meeting will be held in Cooper Union to agitate for more adequate protection of so-called fire-proof buildings.

The United Hebrew Charities and the Hebrew Free Burial Societies announced tonight that they were ready to relieve any distress caused by the fire. The Independent Order of B'Nai B'Rith has opened a subscription fund throughout New York, Massachusetts, Connecticut, Rhode Island and a portion of Canada for the sufferers. Directors of the Metropolitan Opera house have offered the building free for a benefit performance.

Fire Regulations Not Regarded.

Dr. George M. Price, chairman of an investigation committee appointed by the Cloak, Suit and Shirt Industry of New York, last September to ascertain and remedy unsanitary conditions affecting members of that union, gave out tonight a statement with a long list of factory buildings which he says fail to comply with fire regulations.

"What was expected has happened," says the statement. "Those who knew of the flimsy fire protection in the loft buildings of New York long ago predicted such a disaster as occurred in Washington Place. If, however, this building was the only one of those unprotected, the situation would not be so terrible. But the fact is, there is hardly a large loft building in New York which is better protected against fire."

In a statement to the press issued today, Borough President McAneny said that 500 firemen, recently detailed by Fire Commissioner Waldo for the purpose, reported 3,500 buildings lacking adequate fire escapes. The building department has already investigated 700 of these 3,500 cases, and reported that only 10 per cent of them were in violation of the building code.

Mr. McAneny urges a thorough revision of the code, leaving the provisions relative to fire escapes to a commission of building and fire experts to be appointed by the city.

Morbid Thousands Held Back.

While a crowd of morbid thousands was held back by the police, firemen with grappling irons and fire hooks sought victims in the flooded cellar all forenoon.

A steam pump emptied the cellar of water during the morning, and the firemen believed when they rested at the dinner hour that they would find no more dead. Tonight, however, they carried out another body, making three recovered during the day. The overcount last night was probably due to checking off of a charred part of a body as a corpse.

The work of the day shed no light upon the cause of the blaze. This probably will never be known. A spark from the motor driving the sewing machines shooting through the lint-charged air of the operating room to a 4-inch carpet of scraps on the floor, could easily have started a fire, but Chief Croker was unwilling to say tonight that, in his opinion, it originated this way.

200,000 Persons Viewed Corpses.

Two hundred thousand persons, the police estimate, filed in a serpentine line to the pier from the opening of the improvised morgue at 1 o'clock this morning until late tonight. At times the line extended beyond Twenty-third street, four blocks away, and tens of thousands of persons, impelled by morbid curiosity, were turned away by the police.

Nearly a hundred coffins lay in a long row upon the pier, awaiting removal or identification of the charred bodies they contained. Forty human forms, so burned, blackened and distorted that they cannot be recognized, lay covered by white canvas in plain pine coffins, apart from those less badly mangled. Unless they are identified by the trinkets and jewelry found on their blackened limbs they will fill a single grave of unknown dead.

Little Girl Identified By Ring.

A signet ring found clinging to a shred of flesh on a little girl's finger, made identification possible where all other means would have failed. A man who had stood in line six hours wandered aimlessly among the bodies seeking his missing daughters until with a groan he identified a heap of charred clothing as their garments. He collapsed and sought to kill himself, but the police prevented him, and he continued the search for his wife, also missing.

A pale girl bent over a misshapen mass long and doubtingly. Then, with a final effort, she grasped a hand which protruded from beneath the canvas and with a shriek collapsed. The blackened mass, she sobbed, had been her sweetheart, to whom she had become engaged the night before the disaster. A ring on his finger told her of his identity. She asked if the dead man had had a watch. They brought it to her; she opened it and gazed on her own features.

Twenty Sicilian women became hysterical upon recognizing their kin in the pine coffins. A man whose face was marked by a scar of flame, found his brother among the dead. The two had worked side by side pouring water on the fire.

Identifies by Engagement Ring.

A cutter identified his dead sweetheart by their engagement ring and her purse. It contained her week's wages, $3.

The bodies of two sisters, horribly mangled, sat propped up in their coffins while a sobbing brother left them to search for his aged mother who, too, had perished. The fire had left him without a relative.

Picked up by a fireman on the eighth floor, a blackened hand still clenched a pitiful purse in its grip. They pried the fingers away and released the bag. It contained a small sum of money, keys and a receipt made out to A. S. Cimmella. A young man found his sweetheart burned and blackened and fell across the coffin in a faint.

Sobbing women became so hysterical that an improvised hospital ward was fitted up on the pier manned by nurses from Belleview hospital. Hysteria ran riot, and nurses were busy tending those who collapsed. All day there rumbled a steady stream of dead wagons along the approach to the pier taking away those that had been claimed. The air went stale with an odor of burnt flesh. For a time the pier was cleared. During the brief recess, heavy-eyed attendants rearranged the baskets of personal effects belonging to the victims.

One Woman Had $800 in Stocking.

There was more than $4,500 in cash in the pockets and purses of the dead. One woman had $800 in her stocking. Hospital doors were stormed by hundreds during the day and night. A cutter whose sister worked a few feet away from him in the doomed factory, inquired for her every half hour in St. Vincent's hospital. She died between his visits, and he became so violent that the police had to restrain him. He and she had planned to welcome their aged parents from Russia to the new world this week. The parents are on the sea now.

A woman and a girl who lay dying side by side whispered to sympathetic nurses their stories of the disaster, rushing their words in a rapid stream as though fearful that death would check the recital. The girl died murmuring her gruesome tale; the woman lingered, became delirious, and begged the nurses to release her.

"Why am I here? What have I done?" she moaned as she sank back into a troubled sleep, which the surgeons said would be her last.

The coroner and the grand jurymen began their investigation today before the embers died in the burning building. They touched shoulders with the district attorney's men, building department agents, with Fire Chief Croker, Fire Commissioner Waldo and their helpers. There will be a thorough probing and a fixing of the blame, if blame there be, and it can be fixed.

Someone Criminally Liable.

Said District Attorney Whitman:

"If what Chief Croker tells me is correct, then someone is criminally liable, and whoever it is, whether it be one or a dozen, shall be prosecuted. I never saw anything more horrible in my life."

"There are many buildings in this city in which even wore conditions prevail," declared Commissioner Waldo, "On this building there was only one outside iron balcony fire-escape with treads eighteen inches wide, and so constructed that persons entering on the fire-escapes by windows would have to close the iron shutters before they could escape. There were two inclosed fire-proof stairs, only sufficiently wide for one person to descend at a time and with winding steps at the turns. Entrance to the stairs were blocked by partitions. From incations, gates and doors appear to have been locked at the time of the fire."

The building itself, said Commissioner Waldo, seemed to comply with the law governing the erection of fire-proof structures. The owner of the building, J. J. Asch, of South Norwalk, Conn., apparently had observed the regulations of the building department, he said.

HEARTRENDING SCENES INCIDENT TO WRECK OF FLYER

Waycross, Ga., March 26.—(Special.) After remaining at the scene of the fatal wreck of the Dixie Flyer Saturday on the Alapaha river trestle until the body of her fiancee was recovered from the telescoped Pullman, and after identifying the remains by a signet ring on a finger, Miss Elizabeth Shippey came to Waycross today to await news from friends at Kissimmee, Fla., where she would have gone with her husband, John T. Watson, of Wisconsin, after marriage in Jacksonville.

Miss Shippey kept her identity from becoming known until some hours after the wreck, but insisted all the time that rescuers get to the Pullman in which Watson was known to be.

She kept up wonderfully under the strain, and not once has she broken down. She describes the wreck as a deafening crash, then a sickening continuance of crashes for a few moments and a deathly stillness.

Miss Shippey and Mr. Watson were to marry in Jacksonville, this point having been agreed upon after they had started from their respective homes, Miss Shippey from California, Mr. Watson from Wisconsin.

Miss Shippey is an attractive young lady, with most winsome manners. In her bereavement she had the heartfelt sympathy of the railroad men gathered at the wreck, all of whom did everything they could to hasten the recovery of her lover.

Injured Improving.

The injured brought to the Coast Line's general hospital here are getting along splendidly and, with few exceptions, will be all discharged within a few days.

W. D. Fletcher, of Tampa, recently of Chicago, was the first injured passenger to leave the hospital, going to Tampa today with the remains of his wife, who was killed instantly. This death is one of the saddest caused by the wreck, as Mrs. Fletcher had married Mr. Fletcher only three days ago. Fletcher has his left arm and shoulder broken.

The remains of Conductor C. J. Parnell, of Savannah; J. P. Woodward, of Jacksonville; A. F. Baumwart, a passenger from Henderson, Ky., and the negro fireman and porter were taken from an undertaking establishment here today for burial at the points designated. No arrangements for the burial of J. T. Watson have been made.

J. M. Powell, baggagemaster of the Dixie Flyer, was pined for four hours under timbers, hanging by his arm while his rescuers were working to release him. He was face downward, but could raise his head sufficiently to drink water, and was given hypodermics by physicians to sustain him.

He refused to give his home address, because his wife is in delicate health, and he feared the result of the shock. His home is thought to be in Atlanta.

Bride Killed Beside Husband.

None of the other injured are thought to be in danger. The worst hurt is W. D. Fletcher, of Tampa, Fla., who has his arm broken and shoulder dislocated. Fletcher was married in Roland, Ill., three days ago, and was on his way home with his bride. She was killed in the berth beside him.

All night, in a driving rain, the wrecking crews worked, and all day today in a steady downpour. The bridge will not be ready for trains before late tomorrow, if not Tuesday.

The body of W. W. Culpepper, of Tifton, was carried to Moultrie for burial today.

The bridge was a new one, and the track recently laid with 80-pound rails. With each revolution of the broken axle the timbers of the bridge and the piling were cut as with a giant knife. Had the accident occurred on land probably not a life would have been lost.

Through trains are routed via Valdosta and Waycross. Local work is done by trains on either side of the wreck.

The body of John T. Watson, of Landa, Wis., was the last one recovered last night. His affiance, Miss Shippey, of California, who had watched the efforts of the rescuers all day, accompanied it to Waycross, where it will be prepared for shipment home.

W. E. Francis Not Dead.

Waycross, Ga., March 26.—Injured, but not dead, as was stated in some reports from the scene of the Dixie Flyer wreck yesterday, W. E. An additional force of men was sent to the scene of the wreck today, and it is expected here that the road will be open tomorrow at noon.

PEACE IN SIGHT FOR MEXICANS

and brother respectively, of the revolutionists' leader.

Coincident with the departure of Minister de la Barra came the information from a trustworthy source that Francisco Madero, Sr., and Gustave A. Madero, who passed through here last night en route to San Antonio, Texas, really were on their way to join the declared president of the provisional government in his stronghold in Chihuahua. As these two men discussed informally with Senor Limantour in New York the prospects of peace, and thus are believed to be fully acquainted with the extent the government intends to go in its proposed policy of reform, it is believed they will play an important part in the negotiations calculated to restore tranquility to the republic.

Diaz Will Treat for Peace.

From a person in the confidence of the Mexican government, as well as the leaders of the revolutionist party, it was learned tonight that the prospect of peace in Mexico is so bright that the paramount question now is to decide upon the "modus operandi." It is admitted that this is no small obstacle. The Mexican government is known, however, to be strongly disposed to treat for peace, and will endeavor to consummate a convenient means of negotiations next week.

Fears expressed by members of the revolutionary party that political persecution might follow the laying down of arms will be set at rest, it is believed, by assurances from members of the new cabinet in unmistakable guarantees. Such a step undoubtedly will be one of the first taken by the new cabinet, according to advices here.

THREE DYNAMITE CARTRIDGES THREW NUEVO LAREDO INTO PANIC

Laredo, Texas, March 26.—Shortly before 10 o'clock tonight, during the progress of the regular Sunday night serenade in the plaza in Nuevo Laredo, some miscreant placed three dynamite cartridges on the rails of the street car line, and when a car came along they exploded and created an impression that revolutionists had arrived upon the scene. The band, which was silent at the time, immediately started up a march to quiet the promenaders.

In the meantime a force of soldiers and municipal guards ran in the direction from where the "shots" came, and after ascertaining the cause they reassured the people. It was impossible for the police to learn who were the perpetrators.

The band continued its concert, but there was a noticeable diminution in the number of promenaders.

DIAZ'S CABINET SELECTIONS NOT PLEASING TO REBELS

El Paso, Texas, March 26.—On intimations direct from Francisco I. Madero, it is given out in insurrecto circles here today that the selection of President Diaz's new cabinet, insofar as has been given out, is regarded as entirely unfriendly to the reforms for which the Mexican insurrection is being waged, and as a consequence the war probably will go on.

It is pointed out that among the men selected for the new cabinet, none is distinguished for any activity in the reform movement for which Madero is in arms.

A rather pessimistic view is taken by the junta here, although hope for the inauguration of great reforms, such as the removal of governors of many states and the division of extensive land holdings, has not entirely been abandoned.

The promise of Jose Yves Limantour, "an entire change in politics in Mexico," given to revolutionary agents in New York is still lopked to by the insurrectos.

Despite anxiety felt for several days over the presence near the city of bands of insurrectos, Juarez today indulged in its usual public festivities.

DIAZ WILL PLACE GENERAL REYES IN CHARGE OF MEXICAN ARMY

Mexico City, March 26.—Although no one has yet been selected by the government to take the place of General Manuel Gonzales Cosio as minister of war, there is a growing belief that General Bernardo Reyes ultimately will occupy that position in the new Diaz cabinet. That General Reyes soon will return to this country from Paris is conceded generally and semi-official statement has been made that he will be given a command in the army. According to popular opinion, General Diaz, himself, will continue to assist in planning the campaign against the rebels, and Reyes will be left the work of carrying it out. Cosio's part will be to occupy the cabinet post nominally at least until such time as the government sees that it can with safety call in Reyes and place him in charge.

Tomorrow the formal announcement of the appointment of the new cabinet will be made, and Tuesday or Wednesday the inauguration of the ministers will take place.

According to reports received today, the president's selection of the members of his new cabinet has been the subject of favorable comment in all quarters of the republic, even in the cities held by the rebels.

The revolutionists profess to believe that capable men have been chosen, but still insist that the government has not gone far enough to justify them in stopping the fight. In spite of their protestations, however, official Mexico, the diplomats stationed here and the conservative public believe that President Diaz has accomplished much toward satisfying the discontented elements. In the new cabinet there is no man who is avowedly a Maderist; but, on the other hand, there is no new man who has figured prominently in administration affairs.

BUSINESS DULL, SAVE IN SOUTH

Country Is Undergoing Mercantile Liquidation.

In the South, However, Business Shows Little Diminution. Stock Market Is Duller Than It Has Been Since March, 1904.

New York, March 26.—To find a parallel for the extreme dullness of the stock market last week it is necessary to go back to March of 1904, when speculation was reduced to a minimum while the market was awaiting the decision in the Northern Securities case. Never since that time had trading fallen to a daily average in the neighborhood of 200,000 shares.

Various facts and figures at hand confirm the fast increasing impression that the country is now undergoing slow but certain mercantile liquidation. This is apparent in all sections except the south, where business in many lines shows little diminution. Advices from the more important industrial centers, especially in regard to textiles, denote the caution shown by large jobbers and distributors, while the last fortnight has witnessed a falling off in orders for finished product in steel and iron. Further evidence of the movement in almost all branches of trade is found in the steady decline in bank clearings throughout almost the entire country.

Monetary Show of Animation.

There was a monetary show of animation in the securities market Monday when it became known that the supreme court had adjourned for two weeks without handing down the decisions in the anti-trust cases. It was thought that advantage would be taken of the brief respite from the influence of this uncertainty to undertake a speculative movement. The supposition was dispelled the following day, when not the slightest response came from outside circles to the tentative effort of the board room element to inaugurate such a movement. Opinion is quite common in the financial district that steps intended to anticipate the supreme court's decisions, in the stock market at least, have been completed. For this reason other causes for the lethargy of speculation are sought.

April Money Settlements.

Some traditional caution develops in speculation with the approach of the period of April money settlements. The banking position remains so strong, however, that no symptoms of money market strain is found. It is rather the signs of trade retrogression that may help to account for the halt in stock market speculation. The resignation of the cabinet served to draw attention more closely to the crisis in Mexico, and emphasizes the determination to proceed with caution. There is also much uncertainty over the scope of the activities of the new congress which is so soon to assemble.

BALL SEASON BEGINS ON NEXT TUESDAY

The Pacific Coast League Will Open on That Date.

New York, March 26.—Next Tuesday will witness the start of the 1911 season of professional baseball games and before the diamonds are abandoned next fall nearly 20,000 regular league contests will have been played. The Pacific Coast League is the first to begin play and the last to close.

In the seventeen days now intervening before the opening of the American and National Leagues and the American Association season, all on April 12, the Cotton States and South Atlantic Leagues will swing into action April 3 and April 10, respectively.

In quick succession after the inauguration of the big league races, April 12, the Southern, Eastern and Western Leagues open, with the Central League among the last of the bigger sectional leagues to get in motion—April 26. By May 25 the country over there will be at least thirty professional leagues in the field with schedules calling for from 300 to 600 games each.

Great Gale in Channel.

London, March 26.—A furious gale has been blowing for the last forty-eight hours in the English channel, with snow blizzards. It has completely disorganized the mail services and caused a number of minor casualties. The Spanish steamship Setiembre, from Porman, Spain, is on the rocks off Scilly.

COTTON TRADERS WATCH CONGRESS

Expect Attack on Futures at Extra Session.

Generally Believed Legislation Will Take Form of Federal Supervision, and This Will Be Welcomed by the Best Element.

New Orleans, March 26.—This coming week the cotton market is extremely likely to be deadened by the approaching extra session of congress. To some extent it was felt last week and this week traders on both sides will do more or less evening up of commitments in order to be prepared for any attacks that may be made on trading in future contracts.

The general belief is that legislation of a beneficial nature will be attempted and that interference with the exchanges will take the form of government supervision. This is something that the best element in the cotton trade is hoping for and openly working for. As the situation now stands however, speculators will treat as bearish influences any agitation in congress until it is positively known that the measures to be introduced are not similar in character to the Scott bill which failed last session.

Much of a Weather Market.

It is now much of a weather market and from this on the daily swing of prices will be the result more of the construction placed on the weather map than any other factor. The market will open for the week with the trade anxious to discount the weather developments over Sunday. The forecast called for rain over practically the entire cotton belt and should the returns from the belt indicate that general rains fell the advantage will be with the bear side, for the feeling still exists that the deficiency in rainfall as the result of winter drought has not been made up. Of course, with continued rains the time will come when complaints of too much rain will be heard. A few days more of wet weather and planting and preparations for planting will be interfered with, while in the very early sections it will cause foul and grassy crops. The bulls will keep their ears to the ground to hear the first grumblings in this direction.

Into-Sight to Be Very Small.

Statistics were very bullish last week and the movement for this week started off with the promise that the into-sight would again be very small.

The generally accepted theory is that a week of large spinners' takings is, as a rule, followed by a week of smaller takings. Last week takings were exceptionally large, which causes belief in smaller takings this week. At the same time the into-sight promises to be so small that a large decrease in the visible supply is possible and after all the variations in the visible supply are the main feature of the weekly statistics. The figures last week, bullish as they were, had no effect on the market, but it is unnatural to suppose that the statistical position can continue to strengthen without causing an upheaval sooner or later and many experienced traders are watching figures closely, knowing what is bound to take place when conditions are ripe.

SHE BEGAN AS A WAITRESS AND IS NOW REAL COUNTESS

Berlin, March 26.—Feudal Europe offers scanty chances to the aspiring and ambitious to rise in the world. Still there are exceptions. Today, for instance, Berliners read in their newspapers that: "The Baroness Bela Schoenberger, born Rosa Wallenstein, has been married to Hugo Benzel zu Sternau und Hohenau, count of the empire." This transformation of Rosa Wallenstein into Countess Sternau und Hohenau is the latest incident in an altogether amazing career—a career which began as cafe waitress, culminated as mother of an archduke's child and spy on an imperial court and has now efforseed in the almost unattainable ranks of Europe's blue-blooded aristocracy.

It is 30 years since the wife of a certain petty wine seller in Hungarian Szegszard bore to him a particularly vivacious black-eyed baby. This was Rosa Wallenstein. At the age of 10 little Rosa had developed a wild Hungarian temper and at the age of 15 she shone with such transcendent beauty that for love of her two Szegszard peasants stuck knives in one another's thoats. Papa Wallenstein disliked blood being shed into his wine casks. It spoiled the bouquet. So he packed his fascinating Rosa off to a petty town in south Hungary and made her waitress in a cafe. When a rich patron of the cafe tried to take liberties with Rosa she drew a knife and reminded him: "I am meant for your betters."

Rosa's eyes burned up the whole locality and when "the better" came in the shape of Archduke Otho of Austria, her eyes burned up him. Otho, then married and with children, had come to Hungary with maneuvering troops. He expected to stay a week. The black-eyed waitress inspired him with one of those frenetic passions which surge periodically through Habsburg blood. He stayed in Hungary a month. When Otho next appeared in Vienna, he was bound hand and foot to Rosa. She bore him a little girl. The romance was brief. Shortly afterwards the archduke died—as people said of love—and he left her in his will the sum of $4,000,000 or 20,000,000 kronen in Austrian gold.

Rosa was rich now in money and smiles, and she aspired to politics. She played a role in certain Vienna salons, and her black eyes gained her a sort of illicit entree at the Hofburg. What people were saying and doing at the Hofburg she knew better than Franz Josef himself. This made her a power. The immemorial crisis between Austria and Hungary was then in one of its bad fits. Geza Polonyi, Hungarian minister of justice, had the brilliant idea to use Rosa as spy. He offered her a large sum if she would write him letters reporting what the Hofburg was thinking and saying about Hungary. Rosa agreed. She developed into a first-class political spy. This game was brief. When the revelations came, Minister Geza Polonyi got into such boiling water that he had to resign his post.

The Affaire Polonyi made Rosa's reputation international. Her vanity was appeased, and as she had much money she could afford to live for love. She fell in love with the director of an important bank, and threw him over, in order to fall in love with the son of a secretary of state. The latter was so far Rosa's only real love. So she affirmed, and she quickly proved it. For when her young lover turned cold, she ambushed him, and put a pair of revolver bullets into his faithless body.

Rosa's pretty name was again in the newspapers. She was condemned to eight months in jail. But the court influences which had protected her so far—and also it is said the efforts of Geza Polonyi—secured her a pardon. Rosa, however, was not content with her position, and decided that a husband was needed to restore her to her place in Austrian society. She wedded, therefore, Baron Bela Schoenberger. Schoenberger was the son of the famous lieutenant field marshal. He had been expelled from his regiment for debts. He was to give, it was contracted, his baronial name to Rosa, but the wedded pair were to live apart, he in a flat in Budapest, she in her palace in the Johann Strauss Gasse. The baron would have a fair allowance. For a time this agreement worked well and the ex-waitress, ex-(left-handed) archduchess dazzled Vienna. Australia's gilded youth thronged her salon, and fought duels for her smile. As "Miss Rosa" she kept race horses. She developed into a patron of art. The Vienna Jockey Club objected to her way of racing, and the horses were sold.

Meanwhile Baron Bela Schoenberger was doing ill. His allowance, he held, was not enough. In order to increase it sufficiently, he made an elaborate attempt to take his life. Shadows, too, began to fall on Rosa. The unchivalrous Austrian government suddenly arrested her at her chateau near Pressburg, and bundled her across the frontier. The baron lost his allowance. He took to drink, obtained the useful position of fiacre driver, and in April, 1910, died in the Budapest Red Cross hospital. The widowed baroness made a triumphal tour of Europe, where everyone who for but an instant saw her black eyes, fell in love with her. And the baroness herself fell in love for the last time—up to date.

The happy man this time is Hugo Alexander Benzel zu Sternau und Hohenau, count of the empire, and representative of one of central Europe's most famous lines. The acquaintance came at a fortunate time for the count. It began in a Swiss valley. The count was up to his neck in unpaid bills, and angry creditors in Zurich and Lucerne were thirsting for his blood. He fled from Switzerland and made for Rosa's flat in Kantsstrasse, Charlottenburg, a suburb of this city. A horse dealer in Basel to whom he owed $450 lost patience, and the Basel courts condemned the fugitive in contumaciam to four months in jail.

The count laughs at the courts. He is in the jurisdiction of the courts of love, which refuse extradition, and today it is announced in the Berlin newspapers that he has wedded Rosa Wallenstein. The flat in Kantstrasse is closed and the happy pair have flown away on a honeymoon in some creditorless Arcadia. Is it, ask people, to native, sun-baked Szegszard, where old Wallenstein still keeps his wine shop, and wonders what on earth has become of fiery Rosa.

SHEEHAN TO GO BEFORE CAUCUS

And He Expects Another Majority Indorsement.

Sheehan Addresses Open Letter to Democratic Legislators in Which He Says He Will Be Senatorial Candidate Before New Caucus Monday Night.

New York, March 26.—William F. Sheehan will go before the democratic caucus to be called Monday night at Albany as a candidate for renomination for United States senator. So much he affirmed tonight in an open letter to the democratic members of the legislature, and in private conversation he told his friends he expected another majority indorsement. But he is not the only expectant person; Daniel Cohalan, right-hand man to Charles F. Murphy in the councils of Tammany Hall, would not be surprised if a nomination fall into his lap.

Sheehan's Position.

"My position on the senatorship," said Mr. Sheehan, "has never been a matter of doubt. I reiterate that under no circumstances will I decline the nomination given me by unanimous vote of the democratic caucus, nor will I acquiesce in any suggestion that my name shall not be presented to any future democratic caucus."

"If, and when," runs his letter, "a majority of the democratic representatives shall decide in caucus to reconsider the vote by which I was nominated for United States senator to any person participating therein, I say that the position of the new caucus shall be as binding and effective as the first."

Mr. Sheehan would not amplify this statement tonight, but in discussing it he laid emphasis on the "if, and when," which he insisted should be set off by commas, as the introduction to the qualified contingency. In short, he let it be seen that the possibility carried in those three words was not one he expected to confront.

Caucus to Be Free.

This agrees with the understanding of what his backer, Mr. Murphy, told Governor Dix yesterday. He knew then that Mr. Sheehan would make a statement tonight, and he was able to carry to the governor the tenor of that statement, with renewed assurance that Monday's caucus would be "free and untrammelled." In this assurance, Mr. Cohalan, who has the personal support of many Tammany men, reads his chance of success. On the other hand, the insurgents, through their leader, Senator Franklin D. Roosevelt, has given it to be understood that they will not enter any caucus binding upon them, in which the choice is liable to be one of which they cannot approve.

Insurgents May Stay Out of Caucus.

Albany, N. Y., March 26.—When asked tonight if the insurgents would go into the democratic caucus tomorrow night to select a United Staes senatorial candidate, Senator Roosevelt said:

"We will not know definitely until 9:25 o'clock tomorrow night. My impression is, however, that we will not go in."

This was said after the insurgent leader had spent an hour or more with Governor Dix in the executive mansion.

Friends of the insurgents said tonight that the insurgents have been informed that the plan of Charles F. Murphy and his friends is to hold caucuses Monday and Tuesday night without reaching a choice for senator, but that on Wednesday night the plan is to cast the solid vote of the Tammany Hall organization forces for Daniel F. Cohalan, one of Mr. Murphy's intimate advisers.

Pneumonia to be feared more than death from gun shot.

The frequent changes of temperature in the fall and winter months are the source of much discomfort and destruction of human life. Raw, damp, cold air, snow, sleet and rain take turns at producing a crop of colds and coughs. These lead to pneumonia. Nearly every case has its beginning in a simple cough and cold that was neglected. Thousands of people die as a result. It is more certain to result in death than a wound from gun shot.

A sudden chill, rising fever, sore throat, hoarseness, running nose, headache, cough, painful breathing are the forerunners of pneumonia.

Avoid the danger. Try the one, certain, reliable remedy for colds and coughs; namely, Dr. Bull's Cough Syrup. It does not contain any opiates. It is perfectly safe and reliable. It is the best remedy for soothing and subduing the inflamed conditions of the bronchial tubes and lungs. It checks cough and cold quickly and completely. Test it first by sending a postal for a free sample. Address A. G. Meyer & Co., Baltimore, Md. But, to have no delay get a regular bottle of the remedy; price 25c., from your druggist today and take no substitute. This is the best advice we can give you to avoid pneumonia.

SENSATIONAL TRIAL OF CAMORRA OUTLAWS IN ITALY AND CAGES BUILT IN COURT ROOM FOR PRISONERS

TRIAL OF THE CAMORRA BANDITS at VITERBO, ITALY. SHOWING CAGES IN COURT ROOM

At Viterbo, Italy, the trial of the 42 accused members of the Camorra on charges of murder is proving the most sensational and dramatic law trial ever conducted in southern Europe. The accused, confined in a huge steel cage in the courtroom, during the taking of testimony rave and threaten and curse to such a degree that several times Judge Bianchi, presiding jurist, has had to adjourn proceedings to give the carabineers an opportunity to force them into submission. In a smaller cage erected in the courtroom is placed Abbatemaggio, the informer who has revealed to the government many of the secrets of the Camorra. The specific charge against the Camorrists and their leader, Enrico Alfano, one of the prisoners, is the murder of Gennaro Cuoccolo and his wife, who was known as the "beautiful Sorrentina." Alfano was jealous of Cuoccolo's power in the Camorra. Many American tourists come to Viterbo from Rome to watch the trial. The accompanying photo was taken in the courtroom. Left of the middle is shown the priest, Ciro Vitozzi, who is generally accused of being an accomplice of the Camorra conspirators, and who is seriously afflicted with heart trouble owing to his imprisonment and the attending excitement.

BATTLESHIPS TO SHOOT AT BIG CANVAS TARGETS

Six Warships Leave Norfolk for the Southern Drill Grounds.

Norfolk, Va., March 26.—Six battleships, including the New Hampshire, whose 12-inch gun destroyed the old battleship Texas, off Tangier's Island last week, went out to sea today and tomorrow will begin firing at targets off the southern drill grounds.

Preceding the battleships to sea, the Leonidas went out towing targets that were constructed at the Norfolk navy yard, and which will be riddled by the deadly aim of American gunners during the target shooting outside the capes.

The targets, made of canvas, supported by wooden masts on a raft-like float, will be kept moving before the guns of the battleship by the Leonidas, which vessel will have them in tow. Some of the targets are 300 feet long.

On the canvas is painted outlines of a ship and the gunners are expected to pick out vital spots and riddle "her" with a shot. For the best record made during these tests the government will award prize money and to the gun crew making the best record of all ships will go the title of being the best shots in the navy.

Five other ships that were in the roads last night were expected to weigh anchor tomorrow morning and proceed to sea to take part in the shooting.

Madness in Animals.

(Dr. F. C. Walsh, in the April Forum.)

Of all domestic animals, our friend the dog is oftenest afflicted with madness, and, therefore, the most to be feared and safeguarded against. He commits enough serious and fatal ravages, in the aggregate, to warrant the most careful watching. In Paris, France, of a list of 1,903 of all kinds of animals which had bitten people, and wh were suspected of being afflicted with rabies, there were as many as 833 dogs; of the remaining animals in this official list, there were 247 horses, six cats and seven others of the various domestic animals. It will be seen from this that the dog is not the only offender, though he leads all others by a large plurality. In Prussia, that country of statistical delight, there are numerous instances, officially listed, of bites from rabid cattle, and even from that mildest of animals, ordinarily, the deer. As regards Russia, one would naturally suppose that wolves would figure largely as a source of danger in biting other animals and man. Russian statistics substantiate the correctness of this supposition. In our own country, as any western ranchman will verify, the depredations of rabid wolves among colts and young cattle afford a noticeable number of instances as a cause of death. It is of interest to note that young colts seem to be especially susceptible to the poisonous effects of wolf bites, probably because there is some element lacking in their blood, from which the blood itself forms an antidote to the poison, which is nature's own defense against this and all other diseases of an infectious character.

Fatal Postal Economy.

(Florence Kelley, Secretary of the Consumers' League, in The Survey.)

The federal government has undertaken the cost of maintenance in Washington, D. C., for five years of Albert Dewey Carter, a 12-year-old boy, whose parents live in Beaumont, Texas. The federal officials in the District of Columbia charged with caring for him during the years of adolescence seem to know nothing whatever of the boy's previous education or family history. He was brought to them from Beaumont by a police officer, at the expense of the government.

The cost of maintenance for five years will not appear in the records of the postoffice. The burden is, however, placed upon the federal treasury by this action of the postal authorities in entrusting to this young child special delivery letters. He opened a letter and abstracted $5 from it. His sentence is thus one year for each dollar entrusted to him.

The employment of a young child for the responsible task of delivering special letters containing money and other valuables was obviously for the purpose of saving money, which would have had to be paid as salary to an adult, uniformed letter carrier, duly appointed under the civil service requirements, at a salary fixed by law. Could anything have been more cruelly self-defeating?

UNITED STATES IS SPENDING AS MUCH AS $270 TO COLLECT $1

Washington, March 26.—One of the next steps in the rehabilitation of the customs service probably will be a readjustment of the collection districts. There are now 160 of these in the United States and its island possessions, and one-quarter of that number do not collect enough revenue to pay their own expenses.

Treasury records show that while the customs in 1910 produced $333,331,153—nearly half the government's total income from all sources—41 of the 160 collection districts were losing propositions. At least 10 of the 41 were a dead loss. Only two of them cleared a ship, entries of merchandise were made at only two others, but none of the 10 collected a penny. Their expenses ranged from $12 to $1,070 for the year. One of them was Tappahannock, Va.

Treasury records show that it costs $270 to collect $1 at Natchez, Miss.; $129 at Beaufort, N. C.; $75 at Bashear, La.; $56 at Alexandria. Some of the other losers are Albemarle, N. C.; Beaufort, S. C.; Brunswick, Ga.; Cape Charles City, Va., and Pamlico, N. C.

ROBERT GOELET DRIVES HIS AUTO OVER CHILD

Little Girl Dies of Injuries. Coroner Exonerates Goelet.

Middletown, N. Y., March 26.—Robert Goelet, of the millionaire Goelet family, driving through Chester in his automobile this afternoon with a chauffeur, ran down little Marie Potter, who whisked in front of the machine. She died shortly afterwards.

As the girl, who was only 3 years of age, was breathing her last, Mr. Goelet lifted her into the automobile and rushed her to her parents' home, where she died. After hearing the testimony of eye-witnesses, the coroner exonerated Mr. Goelet, and he motored away toward New York.

STUDY OF THE BIBLE URGED BY ROOSEVELT

Berkeley, Cal., March 26.—Delivering the third of his series of lectures at the Greek theater of the University of California here today on the "Bible and the Life of the People," Colonel Theodore Roosevelt declared the Bible should be as much a subject of study in the colleges of the country as in theological seminaries and urged the study of it by all persons as a guide to conduct.

Thousands who could not gain admittance remained in the vicinity of the theater to cheer Colonel Roosevelt as he left the building.

JOHN F. GAYNOR SEEMS TO BE PHYSICAL WRECK

Released Prisoner Reaches New York and Meets Greene.

New York, March 26.—John F. Gaynor, just released from the federal prison in Atlanta, Ga., where he and his partner, Benjamin F. Greene, were sent for frauds estimated at $2,000,000 in the contract for the Savannah harbor improvements, arrived here today, in appearance a physical wreck. He had to lean on his son, John Gaynor, when he posed for newspaper photographers.

"I am an ill man. I've got locomotor ataxia, and I'm just out of jail. I have nothing to say worth the saying, and I'm very tired. Give me a chance to get a little rest, and I'll tell you anything you want," he said.

He went to a quiet hotel to rest for a week or more.

Greene preceded Gaynor to the city by a day or two, and has been waiting for his partner.

Hope Eternal.

(From Munsey's Magazine.)

Nearly every dethroned monarch looks for a restoration. It is one of the idiosyncrasies of les rois en exil. The blind old King George V. of Hanover, whose dominions were annexed by Prussia after the war of 1866, looked confidently for the recovery of his throne until the day when he died in Paris, twelve years later. Although the kingdom of Naples was absorbed by that of united Italy in 1861, King Francis II. of Naples lived in almost daily expectation of a recall to his dominions until his death in 1895. He declined to purchase a residence in Paris, and insisted upon living in a hotel there, with his trunks half packed, so as to be ready at a moment's notice to respond to the summons of his former liege.

King Manuel, therefore, may well be excused if he hesitates, for some months to come, about establishing himself definitely anywhere. The house which he has just taken at Wimbledon, in the southwestern suburbs of London, is only leased, with its furniture, by the month. Only when he purchases for himself a residence in some one of those capitals that offer hospitality and refuge to fallen kings, will his sympathizers abandon further hope of the ultimate success of their cause and his.

MARRYING MANIA CHARGED TO BUSH

Groom Faints When Accused by Bride of Having 3 Wives.

Baltimore, Md., March 26.—Dr. A. Pleasant Bush, thirty years of age, fainted in a police station here today when his bride of a month, Mrs. Lillian Akers Bush, of this city, charged him with having three wives living, from only one of whom he had been divorced and with being engaged to marry a young woman in Pliny, W. Va.

According to Mrs. Bush's statement to the magistrate she was deserted fifteen days after her marriage and coincident with her husband's departure for Washington, most of the wedding presents and the wedding ring disappeared.

When he revived Dr. Bush denied the charges, but said he was a widower when he married Miss Akers.

In default of bail he was committed to jail for a court trial.

Dr. Bush is alleged to have deserted a wife in Steubenville, Ohio, and another in Huntington, W. Va.

SOLDIER BOY JOHNS STILL IN THE ARMY

Washington "Soldier Boy" Johns is still in the United States army and that's where he will stay unless some smaller league team wants him, then the Atlanta team will be willing to pay the $85 necessary for his release from Uncle Sam's boys to once more become a ball player.

Johns, when a soldier at Fort McPherson, as a member of the Seventeenth infantry, gave so much promise that the local ball club bought his release and then shipped him to Knoxville in the Southeastern league. Johns became disgusted with baseball and went back to the army. Now he is sorry that he did.

RHODE ISLAND BREAKS ONE PROPELLER BLADE

Big Battleship Strikes Hidden Obstruction in Chesapeake Bay.

Norfolk, Va., March 26.—By striking some hidden object in Chesapeake Bay near Tangier's Island last week during the destruction of the old battleship Texas, the battleship Rhode Island broke one propeller blade and bent another. The big ship that was scheduled to sail with others of the Atlantic fleet for battle practice outside the capes was obliged to come to Norfolk and go into the dry dock yesterday.

A new propeller was ordered from New York and until it arrives, the ship will remain in the drydock. She is expected to join the fleet off the southern drill grounds this week.

Who Should Be Boss?

(Exchange.)

Once on a time, runs a modern fable, a youth about toembark on the sea of matrimony, went to his father and said:

"Father, who should be boss, I or my wife?"

The old man smiled and said:

"Here are one hundred hens and a team of horses. Hitch up the horses, put the hens into the wagon, and whenever you find a man and his wife dwelling stop and make inquiry as to who is the boss. Whenever you find a woman running things leave a hen. If you come to a place where a man is in control give him one of the horses."

After ninety-nine hens had been disthe usual inquiry.

"I'm boss of this farm," said the man.

So the wife was called and she affirmed her husband's assertion.

"Take whichever horse you want," was the boy's reply.

So the husband replied, "I'll take the bay."

But the wife did not like the bay horse, and called her husband aside and talked to him. He returned and said:

"I believe I'll take the gray horse."

"Not much," said the young man; "you get a hen."

Last of the Old Political Czars.

(From The Old Political Czar, by Roy Crandall in March National Monthly.)

The death of this blind old giant, General Brayton, at Watch Hill, on September 24, really marks the passing of the least of the great political lungs of the knock-down-and-drag-out school, for Brayton ruled by any method that he deemed most expeditious, and he ruled long and with few setbacks. One came a quarter of a century ago when the late Chief Justice Bradley, of Rhode Island's supreme court; Samuel Honey, who was a prominent democrat from Newport; the late Charles George, Frank A. Crandall and a number of other men combined in a fight on Braytonism, and with the aid of a number of good speakers and a vigorous attack through a then powerful paper, unhorsed Brayton and elected John Davis governor, Samuel Honey lieutenant governor, and sent a number of strong men to the legislature.

Brayton smiled a grim smile and then forced his senate to elect him chief of the state police, a post which he used with brutal power to pay off political grudges.

And then he came into power again, and never lost it until death came. He lived to be 70, and died only after shattering a hip by falling. And of the last half of that long life he was so absolutely the political dictator of his small state, that he came to regard it and everything in it as personal possessions. And yet he died comparatively poor, though he handled vast sums of money, for he was the publicly avowed agent of anything or anybody who wanted legislation either passed or suppressed. He handled all of the campaign funds without the aid of a cashier or a bookkeeper, and made accounting to nobody. He paid for what he got; but he paid his own price, and the remnants were his to do with as he saw fit.

Professor Whitney was born in Northampton, Mass., in 1842, and graduated from Yale in 1864.

WILMER SCORES SYSTEM OF DEALING WITH CRIME

Anent the Stripling case, Dr. C. B. Wilmer, rector of St. Luke's Episcopal Church, in a communication to The Constitution, arraigns Georgia's methods of dealing with crime. Dr. Wilmer's card is as follows:

Editor Constitution: Whatever may be the right thing to do about Thomas Edgar Stripling, it will be a great pity if advantage is not taken of the case to bring up the whole question here in Georgia of our method of dealing with criminals.

One fact should be noted at the outset. At the time Stripling was convicted there was no opportunity afforded in our penitentiary, nor is such opportunity now afforded, of applying the principle of the indeterminable sentence. Had Stripling been sentenced to a penitentiary conducted on the reformatory plan, managed by experts, to whose judgment the question was to be submitted when a prisoner could safely be restored to society, and had Stripling, under these conditions, made his own escape, there would not be now in any intelligent person's mind any question that he ought to be made to undergo his sentence. There would have been no excuse for his taking the matter of parole into his own hands; and the question would not, in any event, have to be decided by the public. You have wisely called attention to the fact of the public's hopeless disagreement in the premises.

Favors "Golden Rule."

No intelligent observer of our methods of dealing with crime and criminals can fail to be of the opinion that, whatever good we may be doing in the way of deterring people in general from the commission of crime (and there is no way of estimating that), we are unquestionably doing an immense deal of harm here in Georgia and in most parts of the civilized, not to speak of the uncivilized, world. We are arresting thousands of first offenders, when experience has shown, as in Cleveland, Ohio, that their arrest is unnecessary and starts many on a criminal career. We are arresting and convicting thousands who might be saved by the probation system; by freeing them under a suspended sentence and giving them an opportunity to "make good"—a better opportunity even than a reformatory and certainly better than a jail or penitentiary, where all the influences are evil, and evil only.

We are freeing prisoners who have "served their time," a time fixed on the absurd idea that "punishment should fit the crime," instead of the discipline fitting the prisoner and thus giving back to society men who are practicaly certain to continue their criminal careers.

What physician would sentence a patient with the smallpox to a hospital for a fixed number of days, regardless of his condition, at the termination of that period? Is there any worse wisdom in turning loose on a helpless community criminals of the deepest dle to continue their nefarious work?

Fitness for Freedom.

And on the other hand, if a prisoner is reasonably certain of making a good citizen, why not give him the opportunity? Experts who in this matter (and I do not claim to be one) hold that "not retribution, but fitness for freedom is the only legitimate end of imprisonment, and this fitness for freedom should be determined, not by the public, not even by judges of criminal courts, but by experts trained in the business, and given every opportunity of forming a just judgment.

I have not space to discuss the whole question of reformatory discipline in connection with the indeterminate sentence, but it may be well to point out that reformatory methods do not exclude the infliction of what is called punishment only. It is designed to be disciplinary, and such discipline is actually more deterrent than mere suffering.

Speaking quite generally, the idea that a "murderer fourteen years ago is a murderer fourteen years older," is a strange sentiment to come from a preacher of a gospel based on the possibility of a man's repenting of his sins, and "making good," is contrary to the facts in at least some cases. On the other hand the idea that a man ought to be pardoned when he has "made an atonement to society," is beside the mark. The new penology asks: "Has a man demonstrated his fitness for pardon?"

Purgatories; Not Hells.

I am not arguing for or against Stripling's pardon. I am trying to direct attention to a new way, based on new (yet old) principles of dealing with crime and criminals that has already been productive of much good. I am saying that all places of punishment should be purgatories and not hells—save for the incorrigible man who turns what is meant for his improvement, his discipline, into punishment, and a punishment that ought to continue as long as he remains in that state of mind.

It may be well to point out in this connection, however, that the applicability of the indeterminate sentence to cases of wilful murder is gravely questioned by advocates of the new penology.

Says Mr. Eugene Smith, president of the Prison Association of New York:

"The prognosis that the prisoner is so cured that he will not again commit crime is a human judgment probably true," and "the fact that the prisoner has wantonly committed murder in a sudden outburst of passion gives good reason to fear that, under the same, or a greater provocation, he may repeat the crime; and it is a crime of such frightful and irreparable injury that the public ought to be guarded from every probable danger of it. The possibility of its repetition by the prisoner outweighs the probability of its correctness in the decision of the court of parole. The risk is too great to be prudently taken."

Overcome Evil With Good.

It may indeed be said that in Stripling's case, the prisoner has proved that he may be trusted not to commit murder again. If he has, that is certainly a most weighty consideration in his favor. But, on the other hand, that assertion is denied and he is charged, not judicially, but still charged with having actually committed the same crime again, more than once.

It is almost too plain to need pointing out that if there is any ground for suspicion of such a thing the matter should receive attention at the hands of a grand jury. That is not a matter that can be settled by newspapers or preachers or correspondents, or the public.

But whatever the facts may turn out to be in this case, advantage ought to be taken of the public mind being on the subject to educate public opinion along the lines of a new method of dealing with crime and criminals that has proven, when tried, more just, more humane, more effective. Society should be firm but not vindictive and should learn that "demons cannot be cast out by Beelzebub;" that we must "overcome evil with good; and I beg to call attention to the Georgia Prison Reform Association.

C. B. WILMER.

A "Federation of Poets" is to march from Baltimore. As it is the spring-plowing season, not one of them will disobey a keep-off-the-grass sign.

Long and fruitless has been Mr. Bryan's search for "available candidates," and he may have to meet himself coming back on that same road.

The Houston Post finds comfort in the fact that "they had to change the name of the old battleship Texas before the New Hampshire could get up sand enough to tackle her."

A volume of verse by Samuel Harley Lyle, Jr., of Franklin, N. C., published by himself, has just made its appearance. It is entitled "Ways of Men." Mr. Lyle's former work, being a collection of seventy poems strung together as "Leaves of Life," was well received. There are a number of pleasing love lyrics in this latest volume. A verse entitled "Daybreak," shows the author's range and form of expression:

The night is still, and o'er the earth a dark
And voiceless mystery, half boding, lies.
It is the hour of coming day; now mark
The stars that one by one fade from the skies.
As on the hills appears the dawn's first gold,
By brazen day the night's black flag is furled.
And to the east my eager eyes behold
The sun's first rays flash over the sleeping world.

NO DISTANCE TOO GREAT FOR THE JINGOES.

Difficulties little short of being insurmountable stand in the way of any possible war between the United States and Japan.

The mischievous jingoes of both countries, who were pointedly rebuked at a recent conference at the white house between President Taft and Baron Uchida, should now subside.

There are too many reasons why war cannot and should not take place for it to be seriously discussed.

To meet the demands of the American jingoes who are urging preparations for war would require the stationing of hundreds of thousands of men and the expenditure of hundreds of millions of dollars in the Philippines alone, and then, if that did not bring on war, the cry would still be for more.

Replying to a recent speech of Representative Hobson, whom he characterized as a dreamer and one who was not taken seriously in Japan, Commander Hiraga, of the Japanese navy, said:

Did you ever stop to consider the difficulties in the way of moving a division of troops over sea by transport? It seems perfectly easy to do on paper, but in actual experience Hercules himself never had a harder task. We discovered that in our war with Russia. Bear in mind the fact that Manchuria is within striking distance of Japan and that San Francisco is not. Our work was cut out for us, even the simple matter of landing our troops in Manchuria. To land them in Hawaii would be one hundred times more difficult, to land them in San Francisco would be a thousand times more difficult, to land them in Panama would be impossible.

A one-hundred-ton small boat can carry fifty soldiers, or less, and that is all. It is 2,445 miles from Japan to Hawaii and 2,288 miles from there to San Francisco. I suppose those figures convey nothing to your mind, but if you could realize that the distance from Maine to Florida is only a fraction of the distance between San Francisco and Hawaii, and perfectly inconsiderable when you begin to count up the miles between Honolulu and Yokohama, you might have some idea of what a transport force with a battleship escort would be up against.

The distance from Yokohama to Frisco is 4,791 miles, and from the California city to the Philippines, by way of Hawaii, is 6,189 miles; and from Manila, our distant base of supplies, to Yokohama is another 1,780 miles.

But what matters all this to the jingoes? Distance, and all other things, are immaterial to them.

They are ready to bankrupt the nation, if necessary, to satisfy their thirst for w-a-r!

PASS THE FLY SCREEN ORDINANCE.

The fly screen ordinance introduced in council last Monday is neither too stringent nor too sweeping, in the opinion of Dr. J. P. Kennedy, the city health officer, and should be passed without the dotting of an i or the crossing of a t.

It is more important to guard the lives and the health of the people from the danger of eating food products contaminated by contact with stable-raised flies than to save a few dollars to street peddlers.

Some provision for nets or other protection for fruit exposed on fruit stands or street peddlers' wagons is just as necessary as for the butchers' and grocers' products to be screened from the flies.

The street peddlers' goods receive enough accumulation of microbe-bearing filth from the dust of the street, without being further polluted by contact with the microbe-bearing feet of typhoid flies.

Nets would protect the street merchants' wares from both these sources of disease and infection.

The ordinance introduced in council simply provides that the butcher, the grocer and peddler shall exercise, on their part, the same care that the wise householder does after food products reach his premises, and protect it from swarms of flies that deposit the muck of the streets in the food of the family.

That is neither an unreasonable demand nor will it require an excessive expenditure by any merchant.

The people themselves, taking the tip from the insistent warnings of the health officers of the city, should screen their houses from the summer pests which annually spread the infection that results in an untold number of deaths the country over.

Dr. Kennedy, Dr. Smith, the city bacteriologist, and the board of health are to be strongly commended for their earnestness and zeal in prosecuting a vitally necessary but disagreeable and thankless task.

HOG RAISING IN BROOKS.

Brooks county may be termed the land where the ham trees grow, for the farmers of that county are steadily engaged in converting peanut vines into the finest peanut-flavored porkers raised in Georgia.

A news dispatch printed elsewhere today tells of the interesting plan of J. W. Spain in raising fine hogs.

His methods and success might be duplicated with profit in a large number of other counties of the state.

While Brooks has won wide recognition as the home of the Georgia ham, its success in this venture is based upon conditions which prevail generally over south and middle Georgia.

There is hardly a farm in any part of the state, however, north, middle or south Georgia, where hogs cannot be raised every year to furnish meat for the table and supplement the family income.

It takes a little nerve, and a little capital, and some steady industry to convert acorns and peanuts into pork chops, but when it is done, the returns are very satisfying.

Intelligent farming spells the difference between success and failure on the farm; between the country place where there is happiness and plenty, and the one where the mortgage is never lifted.

A few hogs will help to feed the farmer's family, to enable the family to live at home, to help educate his children and pay his debts. It can be done, and the wide-awake farmer will set about doing it; on a small scale at first, if desired, but on a steadily increasing plan.

PRESIDENT GOMPERS' ADDRESS TONIGHT.

President Samuel Gompers, of the American Federation of Labor, accompanied by Secretary Frank Morrison and two other officials of the great national organization of laboring men, will be given while in Atlanta a welcome commensurate with the dignity of the positions they occupy.

The address of Mr. Gompers, to be delivered at Taft Hall in the Auditorium-Armory tonight, will be sure to attract a representative audience of Atlantans, representative of both capital and labor.

That is the kind of audience Mr. Gompers is accustomed to address when he appears in public, and the kind of an audience he knows how to attract and whose interest he can hold.

He is the head and front of the great association of organized labor, and he has also been conspicuous as one of the leaders in the National Civic Federation, which brings together representatives and spokesmen of both employer and the employees.

An able and a not unreasonable leader, and a safe counsellor of sometimes too impetuous followers, Mr. Gompers deserves, and will, undoubtedly, receive a respectful hearing from a large and representative audience tonight.

A Poet's Joke.

The following letter, from William Cullen Bryant to his mother, quoted by Professor Chubb in "Stories of Authors," indicates that the author of "Thanatopsis" could enjoy his little joke on occasion: "Dear Mother: I hasten to send you the melancholy intelligence of what has lately happened to me. Early on the evening of the eleventh day of the present month I was at a neighboring house in this village. Several people of both sexes were assembled in one of the apartments, and three or four others, with myself, were in another. At last came in a little elderly gentleman, pale, thin, with a solemn countenance, pleuritic voice, hooked nose and hollow eyes. It was not long before we were summoned to attend in the apartment where he and the rest of the company were gathered. We went in and took our seats; the little elderly gentleman with the hook nose prayed, and we all stood up. When he had finished, most of us sat down. The gentleman with the hooked nose then muttered certain cabalistic expressions, which I was too much frightened to remember; but I recollect that at the conclusion I was given to understand that I was married to a young lady by the name of Frances Fairchild, whom I perceived standing by my side, and whom I hope in the course of a few months to have the pleasure of introducing to you as your daughter-in-law, which is a matter of some interest to the poor girl, who has neither father nor mother in the world."

Mistaken Identity.

Walking down St. James' street, Lord Chelmsford was accosted by a stranger, who exclaimed, "Mr. Birch, I believe?"

"If you believe that, sir, you'll believe anything," replied the ex-chancellor as he passed on.

A Primer of Life.

Even with all the trouble of the world, there's always time to stop and listen to a dance-tune.

One hearty hail from Joy in this world is worth all the misty signals of the stars.

"Good morning," "Good night," and "What do you think is coming hereafter" is one way of looking at Life.

With winds whistling, birds singing, and all the rippling music, it's hard to get a born-growler to seek for a flower in the garden of Life.

He sees the light a-breakin' in the saddest sky of gray;
He's always in the country where the happy people stay,
And listens to the clear call of the Morning.

The old Good-Timer—he's welcome everywhere;
The summer prospect's pleasing, the winter-world is fair;
And in the far, last country—we're sure to meet him there,
Rising to the clear call of the Morning!

Every-Day Philosophy.

Arthur Aull, philosopher, sends out these nuggets by the wayside:

"Did you ever notice how hard it was to prove anything on a man who wouldn't talk? Don't get a notion that there won't be strong, well-founded objections and convincing arguments against any course you may decide to pursue. You never saw a man that stuttered who didn't want to talk all the time. Neighbors never fall out until they first get too friendly."

Letters From People

Jeanette and Jennot.

Editor Constitution: The communication of Dr. Niles in your issue of the 21st called up pleasant recollections of the sweetly plaintive ballad from which the doctor quoted a verse, taken—as he seemed to think—from "an old collection of poems now out of print."

The lines are taken from a popular song of 1854-55, having reference to the Crimean war. It originated in England, and it is said that it has a delightful item of romance in connection with Queen Victoria.

The words may be interesting in further support of the sentimental reason for the doctor's communication:

You are going far away, far away from poor Jeanette,
And there's no one left to love me now,
And you, too, may forget:
But my heart will be with you, wherever you may go,
Can you look me in the face and say the same, Jennol?

When you wear the jacket red, and the beautiful cockade,
Oh, then I fear you will forget the promises you made;
With the gun upon your shoulder, and the bayonet by your side,
You'll be taking some fair lady and be making her your bride:
You'll be taking some fair lady, and be making her your bride.

If I were king of France, or still better, Pope of Rome,
I'd have no fighting men abroad, nor weeping maids at home:
All the world should be at peace, and if kings would show their might,
I'd let those who make the quarrels be the only ones who fight.

This appears to be enough to show the source of the quotation and I well remember even after these many years the air to which it was sung when I knew it as a boy. Have written these lines from memory and must express thanks to the doctor for bringing up this pleasant old matter.

Having a very indefinite recollection of the romance to which I have referred, possibly some reader may be able to follow up the point with the facts in the case.

THOMAS PETERS.

Evils of the Spy System.

Editor Constitution: From the very earliest times systems of spying and espionage have been employed by those in power to gain more complete control over their subordinates by intimidation. In the days of Nero the slightest excuse was sometimes sufficient to cause a man's downfall, and, consequently, a Roman noble who had any enemies had to take the utmost precaution against spies to retain his political, and ofttimes his actual life.

And later on, every student of history knows to what lengths spying and secret accusation were carried on in Venice by the dread "Council of Ten." A Venetian might be thrown into prison and executed by some secret order in the dead of night, without his relatives or friends ever knowing why. The most prominent people would disappear, and a day or two later their body would be found floating in the Grand canal. The perpetrators of these outrages were rarely discovered. No one was safe. Brothers would spy on brothers; sons on their fathers. In a public building in Venice there was an opening in the wall called the "Lion's Mouth." Into this many secret accusations were dropped. The system was developed until no one was safe.

About this time perhaps the most striking representation of the evils of the spy system raised its ugly head in Spain. I refer to that dread thing, the inquisition. Two hundred years ago its very name was enough to strike terror to the bravest heart. From the first it thrived amazingly, until its tentacles stretched into every Catholic country, even having branches in Mexico and South America.

Again, in the reign of terror in France, patriotic zeal was often used for a pretext for the removal of private enemies. One month a man would be high in the confidence of the revolutionary party, and the next month he would be executed by the same party. The groundwork of all the assassinations and executions that took place then was the system of espionage that prevailed, and the blackest pages in the history of the French revolution were caused by the spying that stalked abroad in the land like an angel of death at that period.

History shows that any period remarkable for its espionage was invariably followed by disorder and dissolution.

To come down to our time, of course, it is necessary to have auditors to regulate any business, but when the federal government, under the pretext of regulating the postoffice, inaugurates a disgraceful system of spying, its harmful effects are felt by a decrease in the efficiency of the employees, and consequently poorer service to the public, who has to pay the bill.

The federal postoffice in Atlanta is, in the way the clerks are treated, literally a prison without stripes. The knowledge that their every movement is watched cannot fail to demoralize the employees. Frequently this espionage is used for political purposes. This return to the Dark Ages in the postoffice will not only demoralize the service, but if long continued, the time will come when it will be a reproach instead of an honor to work for Uncle Sam. URGES COUNCIL TO PASS M'CLELLAND ORDINANCE

"Some of you may already know that Councilman John E. McClelland has introduced an ordinance in the city council, which if adopted, will force the express companies to report to the chief of police all shipments of liquor received into the city," said Dr. A. R. Holderby, pastor of Moore Memorial church, yesterday. "I would be glad to have this congregation unite with me in a request to the council to pass the ordinance at once.

"Should this bill be passed the police will be in a position to break up much of the blind tiger business in our city.

"For the sake of our boys and young men, every church in the city should stand by Mr. McClelland, and urge the council to pass the ordinance, and save our city from further disgrace.

"As I am talking to a temperance crowd, I know I am voicing your sentiments in this matter. You know and I know, and every man in Atlanta knows that the city is disgraced, and that the city council and the legislature are disgraced, by the presence of the beer saloons and its necessary accompaniment, the blind tiger.

"We can not look the world in the face and talk about the 'Atlanta Spirit' so long as we allow beer saloons and blind tigers to run riot over the laws of the state.

DR. JAMES DICKEY PREACHES "HOME-COMING" SERMON

Dr. James E. Dickey, president of Emory college, preached an eloquent "home-coming" sermon yesterday morning at the Walker Street Methodist church, an institution of which he was one of the first members. Despite the inclement weather, many came out to hear Dr. Dickey's message.

Taking his text from I. Corinthians, iii, 9: "For we are laborers together with God," Dr. Dickey said that the tendency of the present age is to leave God out altogether, attributing all progress in the world to the labors of men alone.

He reviewed the great advances made in science during the two past decades; the great growth of the railroads, inventions of electrical apparatus and other improvements. We are too apt to stand aghast at this marvelous progress and say, "Man did it."

"The thing that needs to be preached today," he said, "is the imminence of God. He is not seated afar off in space watching the development of a universe which He created and then let alone. He is directly taking part in the affairs of the world today and every step of progress that we make is due to His help. We could not get along without Him."

Dr. Dickey then spoke of the necessity of co-operation between a preacher and his congregation.

"If good work is to be accomplished in a church," he said, "there must be sympathy between the pulpit and the pew. Don't be afraid to tell your pastor that you like his sermons. Let the preacher feel the heart-throb of the congregation and if there is any preaching in him, the congregation will get it.

"The preacher must not be magnified at the expense of the spirit, however. Just as soon as we begin to admire the preacher himself too much and forget that he is nothing without the help of God, we become carnal."

Dr. Dickey then spoke of the many organizations within the Methodist Episcopal church and commended the good results they were obtaining. He was a little bit afraid, however, that energy was being devoted to organizing that could better be spent in other directions. "There is a great danger," he said, "of organizing the church to death."

HIGH PRAISE PAID TEACHERS BY SUPERINTENDENT SLATON

Among the most interesting speeches at the exercises incident to the laying of the cornerstone of the Walker street school Saturday was that of William M. Slaton, superintendent of the Atlanta public schools.

Mr. Slaton took as his subject "The Part the Teachers Play in Modern Civilization." He said, in part:

"The teacher of today protects every moral and physical instinct of the child. It is the teacher who prepares the children to be good citizens while the parent is at work making bread and guarding the household interests.

"The teacher's influence with the children determines the value of the real estate of a city. In teaching the child obedience to school laws, he is taught to obey the law of the state. It is the work of the teacher that safeguards the community, and not the pistol of the police or the rope of the sheriff. Wherever the child has an opportunity of getting a thorough schooling, there liberty and hope co-operate to make the best citizens of a nation."

Pointing to the old Walker street school, Mr. Slaton exclaimed:

"No mathematician could compute and no poet could describe the vast moral and intellectual work done by teachers in those school rooms. Society could not sufficiently honor and laud the old school teachers of the Walker street school. Every man and woman in Atlanta owes a debt of gratitude to these, and every man ought to teach his children and his children's children to honor and do them reverence."

FOUR WARD CLUBS TO MEET TONIGHT

Will Discuss Stewart Ave. Widening.

J. R. Smith Has Agreed to Give Ten-Foot Strip if the City Will Take Action at Once. Many Interesting Matters to Come Up.

The scope of the mass meeting which is to be held in the basement of the court house tonight has been so widened as to embrace not only the Second and Third Ward Club, but the Seventh Ward Club and the West Side Progressive Club as well. Members of all of these organizations are planning to attend the meeting in force and the prospect is that the capacity of the hall will be taxed.

Presidents of the four organizations mentioned have issued an announcement relative to the gathering, in which the members of all these clubs are urged to be present. The announcement in full is as follows:

"All citizens interested in the prosperity and future development of the south and west sides of the city, are cordially invited to attend a joint mass meeting of the Second and Third and Seventh Ward Clubs and the West Side Progressive Club, to be held in the basement of the court house tonight at 7:30 o'clock.

"The program will consist of short talks on live issues that vitally affect the progress and future growth of not only these sections, but Atlanta."

The above is signed by E. R. Walker, president of the Second and Third Ward Club, per R. B. Blalock, secretary; B. M. Cross, president of the Seventh Ward Club, and J. R. Smith, president of the West Side Progressive Club.

Among the subjects which will come up for discussion will be the widening of Stewart avenue and West Mitchell street, the establishment of a park on the west side, and a number of other matters of particular interest to residents on the south and west sides of the city.

The matter of widening Stewart avenue is one, it is pointed out, which must be given immediate attention if the improvement is to be made. J. R. Smith has agreed to give the city a strip of land 10 feet wide and 800 feet long on the south side of this street, if the widening is done at this time, but states that it will be impossible for him to hold the offer open indefinitely for business reasons.

Mr. Smith, it is understood, has already closed a deal whereby he is to either sell or give a long lease on the property on the southeast corner of Stewart avenue and Whitehall street and feels that it is imperative that the matter of widening Stewart avenue be finally settled before this contract is executed.

The firm which is to occupy the property, it is understood, has no objection to the widening, but is unwilling to lease a lot just 10 feet from the street, which it might be doing were the strip Mr. Smith has offered the city reserved for this purpose and then not used immediately.

UNIQUE HONOR GRANTED TO AN AMERICAN BEAUTY

MRS LEWIS HARCOURT

To J. Pierpont Morgan's niece, Mrs. Lewis Harcourt, who was Miss Mary Ethel Burns, and who is the wife of the British secretary of state for the colonies, has been accorded the unique honor of being the first American woman to christen a British battleship. The unprecedented act is to take place Thursday, March 30, when the monster Dreadnaught Monarch is to be launched at Elswick. The Monarch is the largest battleship ever built by the Vickers. This particular honor to Mrs. Harcourt, following so closely, as it does, on the report that her husband is soon to be raised to the peerage, indicates the exceptional favor with which the American wife of the cabinet member is held at a court which has most noticeably avoided favoring her fellow countrywomen.

TOM JOHNSON, ON VERGE OF DEATH, DISOBEYS ORDERS OF PHYSICIAN

Former Mayor Tom L. Johnson, who is lying at the point of death at his home in Cleveland, Ohio, has occasional rallies, when he disobeys the physicians by taking food without the assistance of a glass tube. He is suffering from Bright's disease.

ORPHEUM WILL BECOME STOCK COMPANY HOME

The Orpheum will be busy next season, open every night of the regular season, according to plans now being made by Jake Wells.

With the close of the regular season this year, there will come an end to the legitimate offerings. The attractions of Charles Frohman and Klaw & Erlanger will be transferred with the opening of the 1911-1912 season to the new Hurt house, on Exchange Place.

Wells is planning to open the Orpheum as a permanent dramatic stock company, playing popular dramatic and melo-dramatic productions at popular prices.

With his affiliation with Klaw & Erlanger, and with many other well-known producers, Mr. Wells will be able to offer at this house some of the best of the plays which have been released for stock.

He believes that this section of the city will soon be able to support a theater of its own, and with the attendance that will come, as has already been demonstrated, to any house, no matter how far removed, when the attraction is meritorious, he is certain the venture will be a paying one.

While there is nothing definite decided upon as yet, it is probable that Mr. Wells will within the next year or so decide to make Atlanta his home, and direct all his houses from this point. Mr. Wells has been making his visits to Atlanta more frequent of late, feeling that Atlanta is a crucial point.

The circuit is now being reorganized, owing to the fact that Mr. Wells has secured a number of new houses. He has secured an interest in the Majestic in Evansville and already controls the Bijou there. In Memphis, Albert Wels has arranged for the Klaw & Erlanger attractions to play his Lyceum, and the Jefferson, the present Klaw & Erlanger house, will pass to Jake Wells, who will turn his Bijou into a vaudeville house.

Under the reorganization, Willard Patterson, the genial and efficient treasurer of the Forsyth, is due to climb the ladder to managerial duties. The popular treasurer is considered by Mr. Wells and Mr. Cardoza as well fitted to take up the new duties, ready to handle all the details of the theater business. Exactly what house will be given him is not known at present, but it will be a good berth.

The Grand Stock Company has been doing a land-office business the past week, and Manager Perry is now wearing a smile as wide as a half moon. On Saturday afternoon the crowd was so large that it was necessary to stop selling standing room. The matinee audiences have been very satisfactory.

"Have to enlarge the Grand soon, to accommodate the crowds," is the way Manager Perry puts it.

"The Bishop's Carriage" is the bill for this week. It has been seen here in stock several times before. It offers a splendid opportunity for the actors.

There will be lively times when the summer dawns, and the Forsyth, the Grand and the Lyric fight it out for the patronage of the theater-goers, with two stock companies and high-class vaudeville.

Ben Schiller, manager of the Lyric Stock Company, will soon be ready to announce his company. To tell the truth, Atlanta people have already this season seen a large number of the players in other productions.

The costuming and the scenery will be of the best, it is promised, for Schiller got a splendid opportunity through the aid of George Tyler, and bought out the storehouse of Liebler & Co., with its many great productions.

The producer has arranged for the exclusive production of several of the Frohman plays—some of the best, some that have never been seen here before, and others that had only a night or two of chance. He has ordered shipped here some magnificent scenic equipment, a part of the storehouse of one of the greatest producing firms, and his scenic artists will arrive two weeks ahead of the opening to make the production that will be the initial performance.

Hugh Cardoza has received another bunch of Broadway class contracts. For next week the famous Curzon Sisters, the aerial butterflies, will be the feature, and among the stars on the bill will be Howard and Howard, the singing comedians; Niblo's Talking Birds, the wonderful feathered actors; the Temple Quartet; Connolly and Webb, one of the greatest sketch duos in vaudeville, and other high-class acts. William Farnum, the original "Ben Hur," will be seen soon with his company in "Mallet's Masterpiece." On the same bill will be Frank Morrell, "That California Boy."

Stage Manager Frank Standard, at the Forsyth, had the job of life Friday night. With Zeb Garthwright, Jack Harper, Tom Hines and Lum Holloway, of his crew, the opening of the Kellermann tank was cut—a space 10 feet 3 inches by 15 feet 6 inches—a new floor in traps laid, and gotten ready before the Saturday afternoon performance. To do this work, it was necessary to cut a girder 12 inches square, put in new stringers to support the spot, and also remove a 6-inch water pipe, and set back against the stage wall. The crew went to work at 11 o'clock Friday night, and at 10:15 Saturday morning put their tool chests away and went to sleep for a few hours before the matinee. The tank was placed after the matinee and after the night show Saturday.

ORCHESTRA'S THIRD CONCERT PROVES BEST OF THE SEASON

In their third concert of the season at the Grand yesterday, the Philharmonic orchestra of the Atlanta Musical Association, did by far the best work they have yet presented the public, and it was, therefore, gratifying that in spite of the rainy weather, the audience was a large one. Their enthusiasm was indicated, too, in demands for encores, although the program was one of conversative length.

The Haydn symphony in D major, No. 2, was the most important number, and their handling of it was most creditable, from the opening adagio, which is more nearly majestic than Hydn's usual purpose, to the closing allegro, full of the typical spirit and gayety of the composer. The "Merry Wives of Windsor" overture also displayed a unity of tone, of rhythmic balance, which was vastly an improvement on the work of the public rehearsal ten days ago, and the same might be said of the Lohengrin excerpts, the orchestra having acquired even since the rehearsal a marked advance in that steadiness, that balance of parts so necessary to a composition of Wagnerian breadth and variety.

For charm and smooth sweetness, Massenet's "Last Slumber of the Virgin" carried off the honors of the afternoon, although a serenade by Moszkowski, played as an encore, was a happy feature, and the Mendelssohn Wedding March was a familiarly beautiful close.

Mr. Haydn Gunter, a violinist of reputation, was the soloist, and while the Musical Association, in the artists they have heretofore brought to Atlanta, established standards high that only virtuosity could equal or surpass some of them, yet Mr. Gunter gave an evident pleasure which was expressed in several encores. The orchestra music for his concerts did not arrive in time, and so Mr. John G. Moore played in efficient manner the piano parts for a changed program, which included some charming ballads, bringing out the quality of Mr. Gunter's sustained tone, and other interesting selections which were purely for the display of the violinist's facility of execution.

Mr. Gunter's program tonight at the Universalist church will be as follows:

"Sonata"—Antonio Vivalti (Adagio, Presto, Corrente, Gigo.)
"Reverie"—Vieurtemto.
"Vatateado"—Sarasate.
"Hexentany"—Paganini.

DOWN IN DUST CHINA WILL GO

All Demands of Russia Will Be Granted.

Today the Celestial Empire Will Yield on Every Point. Indications That Japan Is Preparing to Act Should the Situation Become Serious.

Pekin, March 26.—China is not prepared to antagonize Russia completely, and as a result of prolonged conferences the Chinese foreign office today assured the Russian minister, M. Korostovetz, that China will acquiesce unreservedly on Monday to the demands made in the Russian ultimatum concerning the provisions of the treaty of 1881. Rus[illegible] insisted upon an answer before Tu[illegible]day.

It is generally considered that there was no alternative course, in view of China's utter unpreparedness for war. Intense interest is being manifested in the attitude of Japan, which is obviously holding entirely aloof, although more powerful than ever at Pekin.

Russia Fears Paper Promises.

While the issues between China and Russia almost have been obliterated by the recent series of ultimatums and theoretically insufficient cause for occupation, Russia apparently fears that she could obtain only paper promises, which the Chinese would not observe unless intimidated. Russians here point out that they have less now in the way of concessions from China than when the treaty was signed.

Some sections of the legation quarter ridicule Russia for not following in the first instance the recent example set by Great Britain in occupying territory and awaiting Chinese readiness to discuss the contested points. But it is recognized that Russia by failing to do this has shown that she does not possess aggressive designs.

The Chinese newspapers, which are intensely ignorant of foreign affairs, are very hostile against Great Britain, which they accuse of beginning the present land grab, and they prophesy that both Japan and France will not be long in following suit.

Japan Ready to Act.

Reports from Harbin say the Russian railroad has refused to transport several carloads of arms and ammunition destined for Chinese garrisons on the frontier. From elsewhere in Manchuria come indications of Japanese readiness to invest South Manchuria, should the Russian investment in the north assume a serious aspect.

In a recent issue, The Pekin Daily News, in an editorial evidently inspired by the Chinese foreign board, declared that China would not submit to the so-called aggression of various powers, and that she would not sign away her national rights, which must be taken from her. Whether this was only a threat intended to assist China's diplomacy tomorrow should show.

THEATERS

Keith Vaudeville.

(At the Forsyth.)

Annette Kellermann will be the star feature of vaudeville at the busy Forsyth this week, headlining one of the strongest bills the progressive and enterprising management has ever offered the thousands of followers of the popular form of entertainment. Annette Kellermann is conceded to be the most perfect woman on earth. She was one of 10,000 members of the fair sex measured and examined by the learned Professor Dudley Sargent, of Harvard, and won the title. She is also the champion swimmer and diver, and conceded to be one of the world's greatest vaudeville stars.

Miss Kellermann heads a bill of quality. The Chadwick Trio, the clever and best character comedy trio in vaudeville, will be one of the star acts and the dancing of pretty Miss Chadwick will be a worth-while feature. Linton and Lawrence, the clever sketch duo, will present their newest success, "The Piano Store." Paul Kleist, the illusionist; the Bison City Four, the character singers and comedians; Carl Randall, the American Lad, and Sampsell and Reilly, the fashion plate singers, make up the bill.

"Polly of the Circus."

(At the Orpheum.)

In a season that is remarkable, chiefly because of attacks by press and clergymen upon certain managers because of their alleged tendency to produce plays of questionable moral tone, it is worthy of more than passing comment that "Polly of the Circus," with the charming Ida St. Leon as Polly, direction of Frederic Thompson, which comes here at the Orpheum next Wednesday matinee and night, in all its massive entirety exactly as seen at the Liberty Theater in New York city for one full season, has been the object of special commendation from more than 100 pulpits in churches throughout the country, and has been pronounced as the cleanest, purest, genuinely American play that the stage has seen in years.

"In the Bishop's Carriage."

(At the Grand.)

When Channing Pollock undertook to dramatize "In the Bishop's Carriage," the four-act drama to be the second week's offering at Grand summer stock season, opening tonight, he found it an easy matter to whip together an exciting and interesting play. Being more than wise, that is just what Channing Pollock did. "In the Bishop's Carriage" jumped to instant success. If the second week's offering at the Grand is as strong with Atlanta as the Emma Bunting bill last week, and it will be, the Grand theater will have to be enlarged to accommodate the audiences. Saturday afternoon Manager Perry was actually ordered by the police to close his doors in the face of at least 100 persons. The theater was already so jammed with stock production habitues that to have admitted more would have been to transgress the city's building laws.

Mary Garden.

(At the Orpheum.)

Mary Garden is primarily an actress. She has nothing in her nature suggestive of the panther-like Salome, nor is she the sleek and innocent Marguerite. Somewhere between the two, abnormally normal is the real Mary Garden, of whom the public knows comparatively little. And she prefers that it be so, for her private life is her own. Her public life belongs to the people, however, and they are at liberty to draw their own conclusions of her art and talents.

Mary Garden will sing selections from her favorite operas in concerts at the Orpheum theater on April 7 and 8. Seats for her engagement will be placed on sale Monday morning, April 3 at 9 a. m.

"The Fortune Hunter."

(At the Orpheum.)

One of the best acted, best written and altogether delightful comedies of the season is "The Fortune Hunter," which comes to the Orpheum theater on Monday evening, April 3 for four nights, with Wednesday matinee. Winchell Smith has written a play that is true to nature. His characters are real men and women and some of them live in big cities and others are found in any village in any state in this country. Fred Niblo plays the title role of Nathanial Duncan, and it is not too much to say that it is the best work he has yet done on the stage.

"The Wolf."

(At the Lyric.)

Eugene Walter's play "The Wolf," under the direction of Messrs. Stair & Havlin, which comes to the Lyric this week, beginning tonight, with an all-star cast, for the first time at popular prices, might be called a poem play of pictures. It is very seldom that one sees a play that grips the interest and piques the curiosity with its first line. "The Wolf" does that. The curtain rises on a beautiful scene. It is Indian summer in the northern woods. Pines and golden foliage mingle their light and shade. A stream winds down the avenues of cottonwoods. In the background are the blue foothills. To the right is the log house of McTavish, with a great tree in front of it. Under the tree sits Batiste, the "Canuck" pulling at his pipe. In the porchway is the gaunt form of McTavish. He, too, is smoking. The two men puff in silence for a moment while the auditor takes in the perfect coloring, perspective and grouping of the scene. Then McTavish says "You say that she died, mon?" This is one of Eugene Walter's strong points—begins this story with the opening lines.

Vaudeville.

(At the Bijou.)

For the week beginning with this afternoon's matinee, a vaudeville bill of unusual excellence will be offered at the Bijou. The special feature of this week's bill will be the R. A. G. Trio, composed of Ross, Ames and Golet, who style themselves "Those Rollicking Ragtimers." Dick and Fannie Mason will offer original songs, acrobatic and eccentric dancing. Lep Meyer, "The Georgia Daisy" will offer some singing, some talking and then some more, and is said to be as clever as anything in his line on the vaudeville stage. The Millards have a laughing sketch entitled "The Clodhopper and the Girl," and the illustrated songs which always form a most important part of the Bijou program, will be rendered by Mr. Charles LaSalle.

the room in the basement formerly occupied by Champ Clark, who is to be speaker.

"Champ, I don't want that room of yours," said "Uncle Joe" when he heard of this plan. "Why, it is right up against the ice box and I'd have rheumatism in all my joints in less than a week."

The room in question adjoins the refrigerating plant in the capitol and is damp at times. Arrangements then were made by the democrats to provide a room for Mr. Cannon on the main floor convenient to the chamber. This action was intended as a courtesy to the man who held the house reins for so long and the action would have been taken whether Mr. Cannon was elected minority leader or not. Immediately, however, the anti-Cannon Republicans were aroused and now it looks as if the minority leadership will be disposed of only after a fight.

Cannon Doesn't Want Leadership.

Mr. Cannon told a number of his friends that he does not want the leadership of the minority.

"I've had my fling," he said.

Unless urged by standpatters, it is not believed he will be a candidate. In the event he should not be elected, it is likely that the contest will be between Mann of Illinois and Weeks of Massachusetts. Both would be sure of large followings should they become rival candidates.

Few senators have been in the city during the past week. Some time ago it was announced that no effort would be made to take up the question of filling vacancies on committees until after the convening of congress in extra session on April 4.

Regulars and Insurgents.

All the talk that has been heard has been of an entirely informal nature, but it indicates that there will be a genuine attempt of regulars and progressive republicans to "get together."

The promotions to vacant chairmanships under the seniority rule will give the progressives a good show and it is likely also that places will be given to this faction on most of the important committees, such as finance, appropriations and judiciary.

WOMEN CRAZED, MEN IN PANIC

sack. As it chanced, he found only newspapers inside, but that did not prevent the angry crowd from binding him hand and foot to a nearby tree in less time that it takes to tell.

"This did not stop the looting, however. The express cars were literally jammed, and many carried off as much as they could walk under. It seemed that one express car was almost full of whisky and chickens. There was whisky lying around loose in bottles and jugs everywhere, and chickens, both dead and living, all over the place. Dozens of packages of whisky and scores of chickens were stolen by both negroes and whites.

Conductor Parnell's Death.

"Conductor Parnell, who was in the baggage car at the time the wreck occurred, was taken out shortly after I reached the scene. He was crushed into an unrecognizable mass below his shoulders, but his head and face were not even scratched. He wore a four-in-hand necktie, and so terrific was the force of the blow which killed him that the tie was cut away clean some five inches below his collar.

"Another man who had not been identified when I left, was killed without ever having known what struck him. He was in the forward day coach asleep and when found after the wreck was reclining on the seat in exactly the same position he occupied before his death. He was pinned to his seat with a number of huge timbers from the bridge and track which had mashed the life out of him before he knew what hit him."

Commends Officials.

In speaking of the actions of the officials of the road who came to the scene of the wreck on a special train, arriving within two hours after the tragedy occurred, Mr. Longshore was loud in his praise of their efficient and unsparing efforts to do everything possible for not only the dead and wounded, but the other passengers.

"I have never seen men work more valiantly than did these officials," he said. "Their every thought was for the suffering passengers. They seemed to take no thought of smashing equipment of any kind, if there was even the remotest possibility that it might better conditions. They did all that men could do under the circumstances, and more than most men would have done."

Mr. Longshore was in Nashville, Ga., at the time the wreck occurred and rushed to the scene in a high-powered car, which carried several physicians to the wreck.

pathy to Washington following the alleged assault.

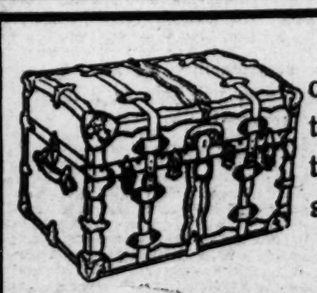

The Rev. R. C. Ransom, pastor of the church, in opening the meeting, said:

"If Dr. Washington had been a white man, this meeting would not be necessary; not because we care less for a worthy man of the white race, but when an accusation, however unjust, or a suspicion, however unfounded, is lodged against a negro, public sentiment may be more quickly inflamed, and if a white woman gives her word, it would stand against the whole world, so far as a negro's word is concerned. We are not here to assail the discredited accusers of Dr. Washington, but to vouch for our confidence in him."

The Rev. A. C. Powell said:

"When I first saw the papers with the account of the assault on Dr. Washington, I felt like getting a moo and stringing the man responsible for it by the thumbs, but a minute later I changed my mind, and knew that nothing since the emancipation would so tend to help the negro race or bring it closer together than this very thing."

PLAY GROUNDS IN OTHER CITIES

General Manager Carey Receives Letters—Directors May Be Instructed.

As some opposition to the playgrounds in the city has developed in the board of park commissioners, Mayor Winn and Alderman Warren both stating that they believed money spent for playgrounds was wasted, General Manager Dan Carey has, at the request of the commission, secured information in regard to playgrounds from several other cities. He has received letters from Seattle, Chicago, Newark, N. J.; St. Louis, Hoboken, N. J., and Los Angeles. In all of these letters the statement is officially made that playgrounds are of prime importance to a city, and that the sentiment for such institutions is growing and spreading.

General Manager Carey has received a proposition in regard to a normal course for playground directors. He has sent to every member of the park commission the following letter:

"Dear Sir—I have a proposition from Miss Rosa Belle Knox to conduct a normal course for playground directors. She has indicated, in a letter to me, that her fee will be $100. Her lectures embrace the following subjects:

"1. One lecture on the social, phychological and moral value of play.

"2. Two lectures on the modern playground movement, showing what is being done and how in both city and rural districts.

"3. Three lectures on methods including plan of term, plan of day and plan of special periods.

"4. One lecture on the story hour on playground.

"5. Three lessons in games, an effort being made to give as large a repertoire as is possible.

"I think we must all admit that we are in need of someonein Atlanta who can tell us just how we ought to manage our playgrounds, and as Miss Knox appears thoroughly conversant with the subject, it has occurred to me that you might think the $100 which it will be necessary to pay her would be well invested.

"It will be necessary to let Miss Knox know very soon whether she is to be engaged in Atlanta, and for that reason I request that you think seriously about this matter, and let us have your decision during the next meeting of the park commission. Very truly yours,

"DAN CAREY,
"General Manager."

COUNCIL COMMITTEES WILL MEET THIS WEEK

Important Papers Upon Which Reports Will Be Made to Council.

This will be committee week at the city hall, and nearly all the standing committees and several special committees will hold meetings.

The ordinance committee, which meets Tuesday afternoon, will have several important paper to consider, including Councilman McClelland's ordinance requiring transportation companies to report to the police liquor shipped to the city, and Councilman Nutting's dog-muzzling ordinance.

The board of health will meet Friday afternoon, and will consider Alderman Van Dyke's fly-screen ordinance.

The police committee will meet Friday afternoon, and besides considering an application from the Owl Club for a locker license, may agree upon some kind of report in regard to the locker clubs that have already been licensed. A report has been circulated that some of these clubs are not being conducted in a proper manner, but this is not admitted by members of the committee.

Important meetings will be held during the week by both the sewer and street committees, as a number of papers were referred to them at the last meeting of council.

PAPERS OF GREAT VALUE TAKEN FROM GRAHAM

Traveling Tariff Inspector Loses Papers on Southern Railway.

Papers of great value to the Southern railway were contained in a leather traveling hand bag stolen from W. M. Graham, traveling tariff inspector of the system, who lives at 354 Ponce de Leon avenue, Saturday night while Mr. Graham was returning to Atlanta on No. 14 from Chattanooga.

The theft occurred while Mr. Graham was in the dining coach. He left the bag on his seat and it was taken in the short time that he was at supper. The conductor was notified and a search of the train was made, but nowhere could the bag be found.

The exact nature of the papers is not known, but although they are of no value to any one save the railroad, they are of such importance that Mr. Graham has offered a reward and "no questions asked" for their return.

BROOKS FARMERS LIVE AT HOME

Hog Raising Enables South Georgia Farmers to Prosper.

By W. A. Hassell.

Quitman, Ga., March 26.—(Special.)—There never was a county in Georgia more alive to its natural resources than the county of Brooks, called throughout the state the "hog and hominy" county.

J. W. Spain, a prominent citizen of Quitman, has the following to say in regard to the method applied by him to the raising of his hogs on Buckhead farms:

"In the spring of the year, when the pigs are very young, they, with their mother, are put in rye fields for a few months, and then are taken off the rye and put in pens built with slip gaps large enough for the younger ones to get out. They are fed on cooked cracked corn or potatoes, the idea of such diet being to force them to a rapid growth. In the early spring they are taken from the rye fields and marked, then they are put in mulberry orchards, and are only fed enough corn to keep them in healthy condition.

"When the spring oat crop is harvested they are put in the field to get the scattered grain, and they not only get this, but thousands of blackberries that grow on the terraces and about the fences. At this time there has not been any undue effort to put on any fat, the principle reason for such treatment making them forage to get grain and grasses. At this period they have developed bones and lambs large enough to take on an extra amount of fat at the next period of their lives. This brings them on to the spring or summer, when they are put on the early or Spanish peanut. To one who has never seen any peanut before, but have been accustomed to clover, a casual observation in passing a field would make them think they had come upon a field of clover in a section where it is least expected. The vines are relished by the pigs, as well as the nut, but it is the nut that gives them that delicious nutty taste that is appreciated so much by the connoisseur.

Turning Peanuts Into Ham.

"The fact is that these little peanut bushes are often referred to by people of this section as ham trees, and truly they are. After this the two-crop peanuts are cleared out, and then the pigs are put in fields of larger peanut and corn, the corn having been harvested before the hogs are turned in. In the gathering of the corn there is, of course, some grain left in the fields, so there is a liberal ration of corn as well as peanuts, and, too, there is generally a good crop of beggar weeds, so the pigs have a splendid green forage, the corn having a tendency to firm up the fat, while the peanuts continually add to the delicious quality of the meat.

"Some who do not care so much for quality plant the peanut solid, but there is not enough grain then to give the nuts a proper ration as is desired. The best way is to plant one row of corn and one row of peanuts. This system is often referred to by local farmers as a row of bread and a row of meat, and, while maybe not expected from gulf farmers, is a more refined phrase for 'hog and hominy.' The hogs after this are in splendid condition, and so fat they can hardly get about.

"Sometimes for a week or ten days before killing they are given corn without any peanuts, this tending to make a harder lard than is possible otherwise.

Hog-Killing Time.

"A hog-killing time is simply in other words a good time, for this means spare ribs, back bones, sausage, souce and hogshead cheese, baked sweet potatoes, new cane syrup and corn meal batter cakes, for all these come along in the early winter. It is useless to try to describe a hog killing, for this must be seen and enjoyed to be truly appreciated.

"The carcasses are dressed, cut up and salted before all animal heat is out of the meat so the salt will take better, the meat is then left out in the open to chill thoroughly, and next morning is packed in large refrigerators built for this purpose. In these refrigerators there is placed tons of ice and the temperature is kept down to 40 degrees eight or ten weeks, until the meat is cured. These refrigerators are not so very expensive, and with them there is no fear of loosing meat on account of warm spells.

"The meat, when cured, is taken out of the salt, washed off and covered with syrup, pepper, etc., and hung up in the smokehouse until ready for market. The smoking is very important, different ones using different kinds of wood, but green hickory, over all other woods, gives a tang to meat, either hams, shoulders or bacon, that just harmonizes with the flavor from the peanuts."

This is the method used by J. W. Spain, owner of Buckhead farms, but is not essentially different from hundreds of other farmers where the industry has become one of prime importance.

Mr. Spain gets the results from the bacon and shoulders, while Mrs. Spain does the marketing of the hams from the farm, and gets the returns.

RUMORS STARTED BY OLIVER'S VISIT

Sale of Savannah, Augusta and Northern May Soon Be Consummated.

Statesboro, Ga., March 26.—(Special.) W. J. Oliver, owner of the Savannah, Augusta and Northern railway, is expected to arrive in Statesboro Monday morning in a private car. There was a rumor here that Mr. Oliver would be in Statesboro today, but it was later learned that he would not come before Monday.

For some time there have been rumors that the Savannah, Augusta and Northern would sell to the Georgia and Florida road, and on account of these rumors the coming of Mr. Oliver is looked upon with interest. Whether or not, however his coming to Statesboro means anything concerning a merger is not known here.

It is also said that Mr. Oliver will be accompanied by several other railroad officials, including the president of the Georgia and Florida road. This is only a rumor, however. L. W. Armstrong, general manager of the Savannah, Augusta and Northern, is not in Statesboro, and none of the rumors could be confirmed today. It was learned on good authority, though, that Mr. Oliver will be in Statesboro Monday.

Mr. Oliver is the man that contracted to build the Savannah, Augusta and Northern railway, and afterwards foreclosed a claim, and when the road was sold he bought it, and since its sale has been running it under the management of L. W. Armstrong, who was his head man here while the construction work was going on. The road traverses one of the richest sections of Bulloch county, and enjoys a good patronage. It has recently extended its line to Stevens Crossing, where it connects with the Georgia and Florida road, and with its connection here with the Central of Georgia and Savannah and Statesboro there is a line from Augusta to Savannah via Statesboro.

PLAN OFFICE BUILDING FOR IVY AND ELLIS STS.

Stock Is Now Being Sold in Corporation to Erect the Structure.

Stock is now being sold in a corporation which has for its object the erection of a 10-story office building on the southeast corner of Ivy and Ellis streets and if a sufficient amount of this stock is sold, the building will be erected within the next year. It is planned to have the building cost something over $200,000.

The Georgia Building Company is the one planning to make the improvements, and it is stated that quite a lot of stock has already been sold.

Plans for the building, it is stated, are now being drawn. The structure will be of reinforced concrete, faced with brick and terra cotta. It is planned to locate a bank, now being formed, together with stores on the ground floor of the building, while the other floors will be taken up with 17 offices each.

The lot on which this building is to be erected is that recently bought from the Index Printing Company, which, together with other Baptist organizations, is expected to occupy a portion of the building.

"BIRDMEN" ARE STILL FREE WITH PROMISES

Crowds Have Been Disappointed Day After Day for Almost a Week.

Fitzgerald, Ga., March 26.—(Special.) The aviators are still in the city, and are still promising to give a satisfactory exhibition before leaving; but, so far, there has been no flying, various reasons being given for disappointing the crowds that have waited each day to see them.

Yesterday one of the men belonging to the Berger Aviation Company, became involved in a quarrel with some boys, and was arrested on the complaint of Mr. Peavy, an uncle of one of the boys. It is claimed that the man assaulted and hurt the boy, and he was brought before the mayor this morning and bound over to the city court.

He was released on bond.

HANDSOME PREMIUMS FOR 1911 STATE FAIR

New Feature Will Be Giving of Costly Loving Cups to Special Winners.

Macon, Ga., March 26.—(Special.)—The premium list for the 1911 Georgia State fair has just been issued, and is being sent out all over the south. More than 15,000 copies will be distributed in this state alone.

A new feature will be the giving of beautiful and costly silver loving cups to the special winners in the poultry and swine departments, in addition to the usual cash awards and ribbons. Fourteen silver cups have been contributed to the fair association by local merchants.

It is planned to make the poultry exhibit the largest ever held in this state, and arrangements are now being made for the housing of 5,000 fowls.

The Mexican government has been asked by chemists of that country to establish a national school of chemistry and pharmacy.

DAILY FASHION HINTS

By Marie Montaigne.

Just by way of disarming adverse criticism and overcoming objection to the harem skirt French modistes have evolved a skirt that has no appearance of being anything except an ordinary frock until its wearer takes an extra long step, when the division that extends from the second broad fold of trimming to the edge of the gown becomes evident. A sufficiently full, but clinging Empire skirt is attached to the upper edge of the fitted belt so that the wearer with every movement of her body shows a graceful waistline beneath the upper part of her skirt.

The tendency to adopt a natural, or accustomed, waistline seems to have been met such a rebuff that dressy gowns for spring all show a short-waisted cut. Even jackets are short-waisted and with this fashion there returns the Eton and bolero jackets of former years with a difference of sleeve and an upward, rather than a downward trend in front. Women who have not thrown away their bolero costumes are adding a shoulder trimming of the mode and snipping off the bottoms of the fronts to give them the high, round effect that is now desired. The fashion for combining materials and colors makes it possible to do over any number of gowns which have been laid aside because of the impossibility of doing anything with them while styles of the last two or three years remained in vogue.

This fetching harem costume is built of Empire green satin and white marquisette dotted with Empire green. Any thin kind of silk, voile, or satin will make up well in this combination with satin, and the model is one that will serve excellently as a pattern by which to make up challies and thin wools, of which there are a great many charming varieties this season. The natural borders on border materials will make pretty bands for the bottom end for trimming the jacket and sleeves.

The short jacket is a loose and comfortable affair with a seamless shoulder and richly brocaded girdle.

To Institute Lodge.

Macon, Ga., March 26.—(Special.)—A Macon lodge of the Tribe of Pocahontas, the auxiliary organization of the Red Men, will be instituted here Monday night, with ceremonial features, at Red Men's hall, on Cotton avenue. Mrs. F. F. Smith, head of the Georgia Pocahontas, will preside, assisted by her husband, Great Prophet F. F. Smith. Another distinguished visitor will be Grand Sachem Henry M. Ward, of Savannah.

BIG IMPROVEMENTS ON THE SOUTH SIDE

Five-Story Structure Near Ward-Truitt Company Building.

In the race for honors in the real estate world during the past week, the south side far outstripped the unusually successful northern section of the city. Usually, the north side "puts one over," but in this instance, with the assistance of Whitehall wholesale manufacturing sites and the "between the depots" activity, the south side came into her own for once.

During the week that has just closed, improvements that will aggregate close to the half-million mark have been announced for the south side, while real estate activity such as the city has seldom seen has marked the week, especially in that section lying along Whitehall and extending out some two blocks on either side.

Near Ward-Truitt Co. Building.

The "between the depots" section, has easily carried off the honors both in the activity in real estate and in the improvements soon to be made. Dr. J. W. Roberts began work during the week on a five-story building, which he is to erect for the use of the Marett Grocery Company. This building will be located on Madison avenue, just north of the handsome building occupied by the Ward-Truitt Company. Inadvertently this building was referred to Sunday as the Dougherty-Ward-Little Co.

This same company, which is admitted to have one of the best wholesale locations in the city, came very near having still another neighbor in the Lamar-Rankin Drug Company, which has, for some time, been casting longing glances at the lot on East Hunter street, next to and the property of the Ward-Truitt Companyy.

Failing to get control of this coveted property, however, the company decided to build on South Forsyth street, just back of the Curtis Drug Company's building, and J. T. Avery, who owns this property, has already signed a contract for the erection of one of the handsomest wholesale buildings in the south. This building will be five stories high and will be occupied throughout by the Lamar-Rankin Co. The building will cost over $50,000, it is stated.

Two More Buildings.

It also became known during the week that two other buildings, each of which are to cost close around $40,000, will be built in the "close-in south side" district within a very short time. Contracts for the erection of these buildings are practically closed, it is stated, and announcement as to their location and tenants are expected early in the week.

But the south side's record for the week doesn't depend altogether on the developments so close to the center of the city. Whitehall street clear out to its southern extremity has shown unparalleled activity in the last six days and this activity has been stimulate by the rapid progress J. R. Smith is making in the development of his wholesale district at Whitehall and Stewart avenue.

Mr. Smith's return from Louisville, Ky., bringing with him a signed contract from the B. F. Avery Company, as told exclusively in The Constitution Sunday morning, gives tangible proof of Mr. Smith's intention and ability to make his holding one of the greatest wholesale districts not only in the city, but in the south, and has helped greatly in sending prices on Whitehall upward in leaps and bounds.

GIOLITTI WILL HEAD NEW ITALIAN CABINET

Former Premier to Be Recalled by King Victor Emmanuel.

Rome, March 26.—No official announcement has yet been made as to the new cabinet, but it is considered probable that it will be constituted about as follows:

Premier and minister of the interior, Giovanni Giolitti; minister of agriculture, Signor Bissolati, leader of the socialist parliamentary group; public works, Signor Sacchi; public instruction, Signor Credaro; finance, Signor Facta; marine, Admiral Cattolica; war, General Spingardi; foreign affairs, Marquis A. di San Giuliano; justice, Signor Finocchiaro; treasury, Signor Abignente; posts and telegraphs, Signor Baccell.

Five of the ministers mentioned were in the Luzatti cabinet.

RAILROAD DETECTIVE SHOT FROM AMBUSH

Rose Was in the Employ of the Louisville and Nashville.

Middlesboro, Ky., March 26.—Firing from ambush, an unknown assassin shot down Railroad Detective Rose at Baxter Station, Harlan county, last night. News of the shooting reached here today, when Rose was brought to this city on a special train.

Rose has been employed by the Louisville and Nashville Railroad Company and it is believed the shooting was done by someone who cherished a grudge against him because of work he has beenconducting against marauders.

Rose was nearing the railroad station preparatory to boarding a train when he fell probably mortally wounded, two bullets imbedded in his head. Bloodhounds will be placed upon the trail of the assassin.

Company to Rebuild.

Rome, Ga., March 26.—(Special.)—The Acme Lumber company will rebuild its plant which was destroyed by fire a few weeks ago. This action was decided on at a meeting of the stockholders of the company held yesterday. The capital of the concern will be $30,000 and the plant will be thoroughly modern. At the meeting Saturday J. H. Taylor was elected president of the company, the other officers being H. E. Kelly, vice president; L. M. Vandiver, secretary and manager, and the other directors being A. R. Sullivan and Ike May.

Screen Doors and Windows.

Macon, Ga., March 26.—(Special.)—Within the next two weeks the city officials will require the placing of wire screens over the windows, doors, stalls and exposed goods of every candy, soda water, fruit, grocery and meat store in the city. This is a part of the crusade against the fly, which will be actively conducted by the board of health this spring and summer. The fly screen ordinance was adopted last year, but this will be the first year of its enforcement.

Waterman's IDEAL Fountain Pen

IS FIRMLY LOCKED BY A SLIGHT TWIST OF THE CLIP-CAP

A UNIQUE but very important feature, original in Waterman's Ideal Fountain Pens, is the cone, or tapering, shape of the barrel. This permits the cap to slip on easily, and by a slight twist, to lock securely. A slight reverse twist unlocks it. Never pull the cap straight off. When locked in, the gold pen is carefully protected. The Cone shape is also the most practical and comfortable for writing. Writer's cramp is unknown in the use of this style pen.

This is only one of the many thoughtful features which have contributed to the unprecedented popularity of Waterman's Ideals.

INTERESTING CASES IN CRIMINAL COURT

Five Murder Cases Are on the Calendar for the Week.

With a heavy docket, which contains a number of interesting cases, the superior criminal court will open today, with Judge L. S. Roan presiding, as usual.

On the first day Claude Seals, Claude O'Shields and Ed Regutti, charged with robbery, will be tried. A second indictment has been made against Regutti, together with D. M. Coker, charging robbery also, and this comes up Monday for trial.

Claude O'Shields, who has "Will Green" as an alias, will be tried on the charge of assault with intent to murder. Another case of robbery has been made against Seals, O'Shields and Regutti, and all are scheduled for the first thing Monday morning.

Three murder cases are on the calendar for Monday, but it is doubtful if the state will be able to reach all of them.

Two other murder cases are on the week's calendar, and numerous charges of assault with intent to murder are docketed.

Mrs. Marie Evans, who has already been tried in several of the courts for shoplifting, will again be put on trial Tuesday for larceny from the person.

SOUTHERN TO BEGIN IMPROVEMENT WORK

$400,000 to Be Spent in Putting In of Sidings and Installing Block Signals.

Macon, Ga., March 26.—(Special.)—At the offices of the Southern railway here today it was announced that the work of improvements between Macon and Atlanta, in the expenditure of the recent appropriation of $400,000, will begin Monday morning.

Most of the outlay of money will be in the construction of lap sidings at points 5 miles apart, and the installation of block signal offices at each of these sidings. It is stated that these improvements will make the Southern railroad between Atlanta and Macon practically wreck-proof. The work will take six months in completion.

Grave Is Negro's.

Statesboro, Ga., March 26.—(Special.) Further investigation into the newly-made grave which caused some suspicion and the county authorities were called upon to investigate it show the mound to be that a negro baby was buried there a short while ago. The people living on this side of Lott's creek knew nothing of the funeral, but the inhabitants living on the other side of the creek were familiar with the funeral.

MAKE ZOO BETTER, SAYS FRANK WILBY

He Favors Zoo and More Parks and Play Grounds.

Park Commissioner Frank Wilby, who, by the way, is one of the live wires in the park board, has become

FRANK WILBY,
Park Commissioner who wants zoo improved and who advocates more parks and playgrounds.

very active in his efforts to see that the Grant park zoo does not suffer for the want of proper funds to keep it up.

Commissioner Wilby is a strong advocate, of all kinds of amusement parks. He says he believes that Atlanta should have every possible place for fresh air and he warmly indorses the playground system.

"It is a shame," he said, "for anybody in the city of Atlanta to be willing for such a public institution as a fine zoo to be abolished for the want of a few hundred dollars. I think the zoo ought to be enlarged and increased. It is a place that entertains, instructs and educates thousands of people. It amuses little children and attracts visitors to the city. We have had a good zoo, but it is deteriorating because the city has not appropriated sufficient funds for its maintenance—shame on Atlanta. There are some people who do not only think the zoo is useless, but who would be willing to see the playgrounds discontinued, and there may be a few who don't care whether or not there are any parks. I want to go on record as favoring the finest zoo we can get, opening parks wherever we possibly can, and establishing playgrounds at every available point. The park commission needs money to carry on this vitally-important work and the people should see to it that council makes sufficient appropriations. The 'Atlanta Spirit' should certainly be invoked for the good of parks, playgrounds and zoo."

You are cordially invited to the Orpheum tonight (Monday). Fine music and exercises. Admission free. Commencement of the Atlanta College of Pharmacy.

IT HAPPENED IN RINGLAND

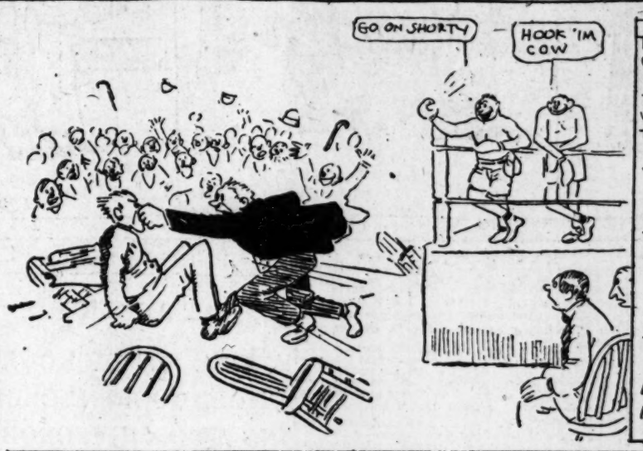

By Tad

SOME YEARS AGO IN FRISCO TWO BROTHERS THE FERLINGS CLEANED UP A PILE OF DOUGH BOXING BEFORE THE OTHER DUGS GOT ON. THEY WERE TWINS AND LOOKED EXACTLY ALIKE EXCEPT THAT ONE WAS BIGGER AND A BETTER FIGHTER. THE BUM USED TO WEIGH IN AND THE GOOD BROTHER FIGHT AND WIN. THE BUM BROTHER GOT A BLACK EYE TRAINING ONE DAY AND WEIGHED IN THAT DAY TO FIGHT. THE GOOD BROTHER WITHOUT THE BLACKEYE TRIED TO GET INTO THE RING BUT WAS QUEERED. THE GANG TUMBLED.

UP AT THE OLD PRINCESS CLUB ON BROADWAY A DEAF AND DUMB GUY FOUGHT BUT ONLY WENT ONE ROUND. HE BUMPED INTO AN UNTAMED RIGHT SMITH HIS CHIN AND HIT THE PLANKS THE REFEREE IN ORDER TO LET THE FALLEN GLADIATOR KNOW THE PROGRESS OF THE COUNT KICKED HIM IN THE RIBS EACH TIME HE HOWLED OUT A NEW NUMBER. THE LOSER WAS BOOTED 10 TIMES IN THE SLATS. WHEN CARRIED TO HIS CORNER HE HAD LUMPS ON HIM AS BIG AS POTATOES.

TWO BIRDS AT THE LONG ACRE CLUB LAST MONTH WERE JUST BREEZING LEISURELY THROUGH A SEMI-FINAL WHEN A SCRAP STARTED IN THE AUDIENCE. EVERYONE JUMPED UP IMMEDIATELY TO TAKE A SLANT AT THE MUSS. IT WAS SO GOOD IN FACT THAT THE FIGHTERS IN THE RING STOPPED MIXING AND STOOD LEANING UPON THE ROPES CHEERING ON THE WARRIORS. WHEN THE COPS STOPPED THE RIVAL MILL THE REAL FIGHTERS RESUMED JUST AS IF NOTHING AT ALL HAD HAPPENED.

CRACKERS LOOK BETTER DAILY

Men Rounding Into Shape Slowly.

With a Couple of Outfielders, the Team Will Be O. K.---The Team Looks Like It Can Hit. Third Baseman O'Dell Leads at Present With Stick.

With a couple of good, hard-hitting outfielders added to the present Atlanta club, Manager Jordan will have an aggregation that will be in there fighting for the top all the way throughout the season.

The team is showing more improvement each day it plays, as the men get the soreness worked out of them and become accustomed more and more to the style of play that each other uses. By the end of this week the club, even with its present personnel, will look at least 50 per cent stronger.

The infield is O. K. O'Dell, at third, and Sykes, at first, the new men are just the men for the positions, and they can hit, too, both of them apparently being of the slugging infielder variety. Everyone knows what Jordan and Walker can do in the field.

Right now we venture to make the prediction that the Atlanta team registers more double plays at the end of the season that any other team in the league.

Miller, Wells and Ulrich behind the bat are stamped O. K., especially Wells, who has been doing all the work of late. Atlanta fans taking a fancy to the work of this little fellow. He throws well, keeps his head, is fast and can hit. Miller and Ulrich are such reliable old heads that they are not experiments.

Jules Watson, in centerfield, will do. He will do seven ways across the cards and back again. He's a good fielder, has an average whip, is a good base runner and my! how he can hit. That's going to be his strong forte. Watch out for Jules; he's liable to lead the league this year.

The pitching staff is the uncertainty yet, with Fisher, Johns and Mayer apparently the only certainties. In a couple of days all of the pitchers will have all the soreness out of their salary whips, and will be curving them, breaking them and using plenty of speed. Then it is that Manager Jordan is going to have his trouble picking, for the present hurling staff, with few exceptions, looks mighty evenly contested against one another.

The Crackers are going to have a good ball club this year. Pitcher Griffin, of the Cubs, is not lost entirely as yet. Swain, Miller, Corbin and Conway, outfielders of the Washington Club, and Lejune and Coulson, outfielders of the Brooklyn club, are possibilities for the Crackers this season. With the acquisition of any two of these the outfield of the local club will be there.

The following is the batting averages of the Atlanta players during the games they have played so far during the present practice season:

Player.	G.	A.B.	R.	H.	P.C.

THOMAS FISHER REPORTS TODAY

Thomas C. Fisher, Jr., the "Grand Young Man of the Southern League," and the mainstay of the Crackers' twirling corps arrives in Atlanta this morning to don the war spangles once more, and with arrival of Tom, the Crackers' prospects jump skyward.

Fisher is going to have a grand season with the Crackers. He will prove the mainstay this year just like he has in years gone by, and his presence alone will be an uplift to the team, for Tom knows baseball and by his example, in there working all the time, the men get the same habit.

The sub-committee appointed by the Victorian Rowing Association, to report upon the proposal to send an Australian eight-oared shell crew to meet an English eight, on the Zambesi river in Africa, in August next, has submitted a report and recommendation, which have been adopted. It was decided that it would be more desirable to send a crew next year, 1912, to the Olympic games at Stockholm. A race on the Zambesi would mean meeting an English crew only, while continental Europe and America may also be represented at the Olympic regatta. The expenses of the Australian crew to the Olympic games, about $9,000, may be paid by the English Olympic committee.

WHITE SOX $10,000 INFIELDER WHO WILL BE OUT OF GAME

Russell Blackburne, the $10,000 infielder of the Chicago Americans, has recided to undergo an operation to remove a floating cartilage which has troubled him for some time and which was aggravated by an injury sustained while playing basketball the past winter. According to Blackburne, the surgeons have promised a cure, and he hopes to be on the diamond once more before the season is far advanced. Recent reports said that his baseball days were over. Last season Blackburne made a poor showing in the big league. The harsh criticism of the baseball experts in different cities unnerved him so that last August he asked President Comiskey to send him back to the minors.

HEREDITY

By Edward M. Ashenback.

(From "Humor Among the Minors.")

Edited by Jack Ryder.

Mickey Corcoran, the infielder the Cincinnati club purchased from Buffalo recently, was playing for a number of years in the Eastern League. Corcoran is a Buffalo boy, and his parents were regular visitors to the games in his home city.

His venable mother, on one of his first visits to Buffalo, was very anxious to know how her boy was doing, so she hunted up Corcoran's manager and asked, "Sure, and how is my boy, Mickey, getting on?"

On being informed that Mickey was about as good as there was in the league, she proudly replied, "Faith, it's only natural that my Mickey is a grand player. Faith, warn't his fayther the best handball player in O'Irland?"

M'BRIDE LEADS WITH THE STICK

Senators' Captain Best Hitter in Ten Games.

George McBride, captain of the Washington team, leads all his teammates with the stick in the ten games that the Senators have played since they have been in Atlanta. One of these games was against Tech, one against Atlanta and the other eight between themselves.

McBride has a swatting record of .438. Walker, Hughes and Moyer have a higher record, but they have been in only one or two games. Milan is second to McBride, with .406.

The Senators' captain has made the most number of hits, with 14. Milan is second, with 13. The other players who have made 10 or more hits are Henry, 11; Ainsmith, 10; Corbin, 10.

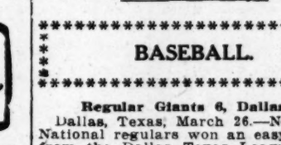

John Henry has tallied the most number of times, making 11 trips to the pan. McBride and Milan are tied for second place, with 8 runs apiece.

The Senators will resume their games this morning, weather permitting. The Regulars and the Shamrocks are tied so far, each team having won three games, and two resulting in a tie. Johnson will twirl for the Shamrocks and Walker for the Regulars. A good game should be the result.

The Senators will remain in Atlanta until a week from yesterday, leaving then for their home. Next week they will play games with Atlanta on Monday, Tuesday, Friday and Saturday.

The Western Golf Association proposes the inauguration of a new system in distributing the prizes among the golfers in the future open tournaments. It is proposed to give the amateur who finishes within the prize list a medal of gold, silver or bronze, according to the place he wins, instead of the usual silver cups, which in times gone by were given. The cash awards will be limited to the professionals and the proposed new plan will make the amateur play simply for the glory.

President Ed Barrow, of the Eastern League of Baseball Clubs, has secured half a dozen 6-foot umpires for this season. He also decided that the official scorers keep tab on the number of times men receive bases on balls and strike out how many runs each batter drives in and the number of times catchers throw out men who try to steal bases and the names of the base runners. The latter is said to be new in baseball.

Never before have foreign purses appealed to American pugilists as at this time. With Billy Papke and Johnny Clabby in Australia, Sam Langford, Porky Flynn and Harry Lewis in England, and now Joe Jeanette, Jim Barry and Leo Houck are about to follow, as well as many other boxers of note are going to fight before foreign audiences this summer.

The Buffalo Germans' basketball team and the Herkimer quintet of Rochester, who stopped the Germans' winning career, after they won 105 consecutive games, are to play a series of three games for a reported purse of $1,000, on April 7, 8 and 9, in Buffalo. The De Neri team of Philadelphia, who won the Eastern League championship, are to play McKeesport, Pa., team, who won the Central League championship, a series of three games, for the professional championship of the east.

THROWN FROM HIS SEAT WHEN WHEEL HIT PUDDLE

Jacksonville, Fla., March 26.—On account of the stiff northeaster which has been blowing over the Atlantic-Pablo Beach course, in addition to the downpour of rain last night, the automobile races which were scheduled to commence tomorrow, were postponed until Tuesday.

Upon visiting the course this morning after the tide had receded, the officials found the course cuppy and small slews scattered along the route, and while the conditions would be ideal for racing tomorrow, they deemed it advisable to postpone the opening for one day to enable the course to resume its marble-like surface for the 1-mile world's record trials.

The program will remain the same, with the exception of the events arranged for tomorrow, which will be transferred to Friday.

While practicing over the course this morning F. C. Fincke, New York agent of the Pope-Hartford cars, who was riding with Louis Disbrow, in the Pope-Hummer, had a narrow escape from death. The car was traveling at an 80-mile-an-hour clip when the left front wheel hit a small puddle, throwing Fincke out of the car over the hood, but fortunately his fall was broken by his foot catching in the oil pump, and he sustained only slight injuries to his right leg.

CHASE'S YANKEES HERE FOR GAMES

Manager Hal Chase and his New York Americans will give battle to Manager Otto Jordan and his Crackers at Ponce de Leon park today and on Tuesday.

The coming of the Yankees is interesting by reason of the appearance here of two former Crackers, men who did much to win the pennant for Atlanta in 1907 and are now regarded as mainstays for the Yankees.

They are Russell Ford, the spitball pitcher, who finished second to Bender among the American League pitchers last season and who has as a catcher Ed Sweeney, who worked in the same capacity when with Atlanta.

McGraw and his Giants will be the attraction for the remainder of the week, commencing with a game on Wednesday. The stay of the Giants should be of considerable interest and the reason that the Giants are staying so long this season is because of the good crowds that turned out to see them last season.

Of course, the appearance here of Christy Mathewson, without a doubt the greatest twirler in the business today, is the main issue that will interest local fans, and as the Giants are here for four games, no doubt he will work a part of one of the games.

With the Giants also comes famous Bugs Raymond, a former Cracker, and the man who is now the talk of the baseball world because he is sitting astride of the water wagon, the eyes of the fans all over the country being on him and watching to see whether he falls or not. He has stayed on the wagon a long time now, and every day he gets better and makes the heart of McGraw more glad as the result. Bugs, when sober, is as good as any of them in the business. He should have a grand year this year.

Frank Manush, with the Pelicans last season, is also a member of the Giants.

On Monday and Tuesday of the following week the Washington Americans will play the Crackers. Toronto of the Eastern League will be here on Wednesday and Thursday, and Washington again on Friday and Saturday.

CRACKERS SURE TO BE WINNER; HUGH FULLERTON SAYS NOT

The local baseball team is sure to be a winner this season. Hugh Fullerton, baseball writer of the Chicago Examiner says not. That's the reason why the first statement is made.

"The team here is a joke. Otto Jordan appears to be about the only player worth mentioning." So said Fullerton in the Examiner on Friday. About the same kind of a statement was made by this same Fullerton previous to the playing of the world's series last fall.

What's the answer? Do you get the meaning.

Fullerton never looks further than the end of his nose when watching the work of any other team besides the Cubs. He can't see any other team but them.

He says nothing about the Atlanta team making as many hits as the Cubs in both of their games, yet the Crackers were batting agains twirlers who had something on their balls, while the Atlanta twirlers were either wild or sending them straight over. No man was in shape with the exception of Mayer, who could go in and pitch anything but straight ones.

O'Dell and Watson got more hits than any men on the Cub team, yet, "there is no player worth mentioning."

That Fullerton does not like the Atlanta club is the best recommendation that the club can have, if all of his procrastinations miss the mark as far as his about the world's series did. Anyway the similarity of the two is such that it seems that Mr. Fullerton can chime out "stung again."

19 DAYS MORE

DOC RALSTON NOT FOR THE CRACKERS

The published report that Doc Ralston, a young outfielder of the Washington team was to become a Cracker, is without foundation. Atlanta does not want him. He is going to be sent back to Akron in the O. and P. league, where he came from.

Ralston might make Atlanta a good man, but Washington bought him from Akron with the option that if he made good, the Washington club would pay the Akron club a stipulated sum of money. He's not worth the money to Atlanta that they would have to pay for him. Better ball players than Ralston could be bought for the sum in question.

Some Others.

Corbin, Conway, Miller and Swain, four others on the Washington squad are the men that Atlanta wants. She wants two of these and the first two in particular. Today some development as to who Washington is going to leave here may result and maybe by the afternoon, one of the four men mentioned will be in an Atlanta uniform in the game against the New York Americans.

Chicago has an outfielder that Atlanta wants, and she also has a pitcher, our old friend Texas Griffin. There may be some developments from that end in a few days. According to the Chicago Tribune of Saturday, Presidents Murphy and Heisman were discussing the little fellow, Ball, who played right field for the Yannigans on Friday. Jordan said last night that he did not want Ball, but another man. Coulson and Lejune of the Trolley Dodgers are also two other men who were being considered, but Brooklyn is going to hold onto both of these men.

Developments regarding all of the above mentioned men can be expected within a few days, and the personnel of the Cracker team will begin to take on a different aspect.

April 1 has been set by the board of directors of the Federation of American Motorcyclists as the time limit for filing applications for this year's races. The award will be made early in April. Indianapolis, Buffalo, Detroit, Denver, Springfield, Mass., and Newark are reported after the races.

Louis Blot, the San Francisco boxing promoter, intends to erect a big arena at Tia Juana, Mexico, backed by a couple of Los Angeles bankers. Blot says he is willing to put up a purse of $40,000 for a 45-round match between Sam Langford and Jack Johnson.

GEORGIA CLASHES WITH CLEMSON

University of Georgia, Athens, Ga., March 26.—(Special.)—The new uniforms for the baseball team have arrived and are the handsomest that Georgia has had in several seasons. they are of gray color with red military collar; a red diamond figure with a black "G" inside of it on the upper part of the sleeve, and "Georgia" on the front seam of the blouse. It makes an attractive uniform and one that won't show the effects of being soiled easily. Red and black stockings will probably be used with them to carry out the color scheme and will add much to the appearance.

They will appear in these uniforms first in the games with Clemson at Clemson on Monday and Tuesday, and have been working hard to start the season by winning these games. The next games will be on April 4 and 5 with Mercer in Macon. These will be hard fought games as Georgia and Mercer are old rivals and always put up their best games against each other. The first games in Athens will be on April 7 and 8, with Auburn.

SALLY LEAGUE OPENS IN WEEK

One week from today the South Atlantic League will open its season. The official schedule sets April 3 as the opening date and September 9 as the closing one.

The season will open with Savannah playing in Charleston, Augusta in Columbia, Jacksonville in Albany and Macon in Columbus.

This year there is an eight-club league and the prospect appears to be the best of any of the seasons since this fast little circuit has been running and every city boasts of having a winning club lined up to do battle.

Eddie Root, Joe Fogler and Kramer will be America's strongest representatives when the world's bicycle races will be held in Newark next year. It will be the first time the big events have been pulled off in this country. They are being held in Italy this year.

12,000 PERSONS WILL PAY HIGH TO SEE MORRIS-SCHRECK FIGHT

Sapulpa, Okla., March 26.—With prices high enough for a championship fight, more than half of the arena seats already sold and indications that 12,000 paid admissions will be received before the gates are opened, the Morris-Schreck fight next Tuesday promises to be the greatest pugilistic event ever witnessed in the southwest.

Mike Schreck, of Cincinnati, accompanied by his manager, Billy Corcoran, arrived from Pittsburg last night. Morris has been taking his exercise in smaller doses for several days. He goes to bed early in the evening, and sleeps late in the morning. His work is sufficient to keep him in splendid condition. He is confident he will win.

Alfred Shrubb, Hans Holmer and Ljungstrom are among the professional runners who will compete in England this summer. Shrubb will depart about the middle of April and may be accompanied by Agoose, the Canadian Indian long-distance runner, who should prove a big attraction over there.

NOW, this man's case is much like many others. He is earning $18 per week, and paying $12.50 per month house rent; has a family of children, lives in a fairly good neighborhood, with about room enough around his house for three blades of grass. Necessarily, the children are in the street; he has not accumulated any money. He saw the ad of The Atlanta Realty Owners about our Union City blocks, and in April will move down there. He will be able to raise enough garden stuff, even at that late date, to save the payments on his lot; in another year, he will have chickens enough to pay practically all his family expenses, and in five years he will have his lot paid for and his children will have grown up in the healthiest atmosphere around Atlanta. Fashion Had Spoiled Her.

(From The Los Angeles Times.)

A squaw attired in a hobble skirt was the unusual sight presented in the police court in this city. The young Indian woman was the complaining witness against her husband, who pleaded guilty to having beaten and kicked her. He stated that her offense consisted of a refusal to return to the wickiup and cook dinner for him. The judge gave the Indian thirty days on the chaingang, and the Piute maiden smiled her approval of the sentence.

ON "THE PROBLEM OF SIN" REV. J. W. HAM PREACHES

"Beloved, in the absence of Dr. Broughton tonight, who, as you know, was called to Raleigh last night to attend the funeral of his brother, who died very suddenly, I desire to bring to you a message on 'The Problem of Sin,'" said Rev. J. W. Ham, at the Tabernacle last night.

"It need hardly be said here that sin is lawlessness. Upon that, we all agree. In its final analysis, sin is related to God. It is my earnest desire to press home that truth this evening. We are all conscious that sin is related to us individually and collectively.

"But, because we only go this far, we have lost the deepest definition of sin. You recall in David's confession, following his downfall, his clear conception of the enormity of his sin. It was against God. Eliminate the idea of God and the possibility of sin is instantly removed. Sin would become an abstraction in that case; whereas the fact is sin is personal offense against a personal being with whom we have love relations; so transgression is the breaking of God's heart and the production of sorrow of soul with Him as well as with the transgressor. The necessity of the atonement rests upon the fact of sin in the present tense. The emphasis characterizing the preaching of the past centuries has been laid upon the doctrine of original sin. The preaching of the atonement of the present day is dealing with sin as a present experience, and by the atonement is offering a present salvation. It is proclaiming delivery from the wrath to come by the incorporation into one's life the expulsive power of the atonement to deliver one from the sin of the present. Just as certainly as I believe in the creative power of man in material matters, so do I believe in his power to originate sin. Sin is not only something born in him, but something done by him.

II—Present Day Tendency.

"The present day tendency is to weaken the sense of sin. The cause may lie in the fact that we have been swinging away from the sovereignty of God over to the Fatherhood. It may sound paradoxical, but I have often found where sin is feared less it is often hated most, provided the fear is gauged by the emotional faculty. The emotional side no longer carries an overwhelming sense of guilt; however, the present day scientific teaching is proclaiming the fact of the opposition of sin to divine order and its inevitable punishment.

"In opposition to this teaching we find the agency that has caused this weakening sense of sin to be the majority of the novels and writings of sociologists, who deal with sin as a sort of moral deformity that can easily be cured by change of environment. A gigantic failure was recently witnessed in the attempt on the part of some professors of this school of thought, who brought over from Africa quite a number of men from the Cannibal regions. They were matriculated and graduated from a university. Not once during their stay was the fact of God's redemptive method presented to them. Environment minus God was all that was offered them. They were returned to Africa to change the environment and lives of their fellow beings—dismal failure. In less than twelve months they were practicing again Cannibalistic vices. Theosophy and pantheistic cults attempt to whittle sin down to a vanishing point, and it remains for Christian Science to step in with its age-long heresy, adorned with new collars and cuffs, to say in its Miscellaneous Writings, on page 286:

"'To call sin real and man a sinner, needing a Savior, is an illusion.' The statement has not the merit of logic. If sin be not real, a savior is unnecessary. Minimizing of sin cheapens the work of redemption. Sin is the most patent fact with which we have to deal—the darkest experience in the human race, the root of all the world's tragedies. Mr. Stripling, who so much deserves a pardon, has been made to feel in these weeks the truth of this statement: 'Sin has its own reward.' It pays off in installments and always pays up finally and fully. Lady Macbeth, walking in her sleep after the murder of Duncan, goes through the motion of washing her hands, saying, 'Out, damned spot! Out, I say!' Upon its failure to come out, she exclaims, "Here is the smell of blood still and all the perfume of Arabia will not sweeten this little hand. Oh! Oh! Oh!" The late Prof. William James, the renowned psychologist, reduced the residue of religion to two things: 'Something wrong about us as we naturally stand and a sense that we are saved by making connection by higher powers.' Yea, verily! something wrong, centrally, radically wrong! It is the breaking of the main spring of the watch, the disablement of the ship's engine. The sense of wrong universal, it is dim and hazy, the moral consciousness is drowsy. The conviction of sin needs to be brought home by the revelation of sinlessness, suffering for sin, and it is this universal consciousness of wrong that the atonement faces and proposes to answer by putting right the wrong and establishing a new sense of relationship freeing him from the condemnation and reinforcing himself against himself.

III—The How.

"The atonement is set in living personal relation; the relation of God to His child is not a legal, but a vital one. Man has too long been led to look upon the Kinghood of God to the exclusion of Fatherhood. The universal cry today is, 'Show us the Father.' In the act of the atonement Fatherhood and not Kinghood is central. The primary object is the salvation of man. Governmental relations are subordinated here.

"In the story of the prodigal son, we have the father's restoration of an erring son to his rightful relationship. Between the lines we may read years of agonizing over the son's lost condition and relation. The Cross supplies what is left out in this story; namely, the divine self-action, going out after man, seeking to restore him to the consciousness of sonship and a recognition of filial relationship, which is closer than that of a subject to a king. God is now separated from man by character, but allied to him by love.

"'Wherefore in all things it behooveth him to be made like unto his brethren, that he might be a merciful and faithful high priest in things pertaining to God to make reconciliation for the sins of his people.'—Heb. ii: 17.

"The reconciliation of man revolves around three factors: A Heavenly Father, an erring child and a Divine Son, and around these three personalities the drama of redemption is seen; the relationship of each is vital to the other to the completion of the happiness of all."

SAMUEL GOMPERS REACHES ATLANTA

he is now a man of 60, although, barring his thin gray locks, he does not look it.

Mr. Gompers was not in a very talkative mood Sunday morning, owing probably to depressing effect of the cold east wind and the rain.

On Wealth and Politics.

"This is not much of a sunny south," was his first remark, "but I have been in Atlanta before, and know that this weather is an exception."

When asked what he thought about the present status of national politics, Mr. Gompers shrugged his shoulders and replied:

"Well, there isn't room for much thinking on that question right now, for we have got to just sit still, wait a while and watch. The country expects some great things in the way of constructive legislation from the democratic congress, as much has been promised and much is needed. We have eighteen union labor men in the present congress, and they will stand for anything that looks toward good, sound and just constructive legislation."

"What about the tariff?" he was asked.

"I'm not laying any special stress on the tariff," he replied. "The tariff, if a horizontal reduction is made, is only one feature of the constructive legislation the people are looking for, and expect. By constructive legislation, I mean good, wholesome laws that will benefit all classes of people without doing injustice to any."

About the Contempt Case.

Mr. Gompers was asked about the contempt case against him and Secretary Frank Morrison. He said the case was now pending in the supreme court. Mr. Gompers and Mr. Morrison, it will be remembered, published official statements from the federation, which placed on the "unfair list" the Buck Stove Company, which employed non-union labor. This was done after the court had issued an injunction. They were held in contempt, and sentenced to imprisonment, but were allowed their liberty pending an appeal to the supreme court. In the meantime the stove company has adjudicated its differences with the federation, and is now employing union labor. The government, however, is now behind the contempt case.

"There is nothing," said Mr. Gompers, "that I can say which is new about the case. I am not losing any sleep over it. It is possible that Mr. Morrison and I may have to serve a sentence for contempt, so we are here now making all arrangements for our big convention so if we are locked up next November the meeting can go along without us."

Mr. Gompers smiled when he said this, but his keen eyes snapped as he spoke.

There will probably be a large crowd present Monday night to hear Mr. Gompers, as he is a fine speaker, and has some very interesting things to say concerning the big labor organization of which he is the head.

Farmer Loses Home.

Statesboro, Ga., March 26.—(Special.) Fire destroyed the home of J. B. Lanier, a prosperous white farmer living near Brooklet, yesterday. Besides his home, Mr. Lanier lost nearly all of his household effects and came near losing about twenty-five bales of sea island cotton which he had stored a few feet from the burning building. The loss is partially covered by insurance.

First Shipment Made.

Fitzgerald, Ga., March 26.—(Special.) The Fitzgerald Cotton Mills made its first shipment of cloth today. It consisted of 5,000 yards of heavy duck, and was consigned to the Great Fall Bleaching and Dye Works, Somersworth, N. H. The Fitzgerald mills now run 120 looms, making all classes of duck, sheeting and drills.

Revival at Cedartown.

Cedartown, Ga., March 26.—(Special.) Rev. B. P. Allen, the pastor of the First Methodist church, has been conducting a series of meetings at his church for one week. During this time he has not had any outside help, doing all of the preaching himself.

New Building Started.

Rome, Ga., March 26.—(Special.)—Work on the Simpson Grocery company building, which is to be a three-story structure at the corner of East First street and Second avenue, will commence early Monday morning. A permit for the building has been issued showing it is to cost $21,000. So far this month 20 building permits have been issued, calling for an expenditure in new property of $32,650.

Aviator Will Die of Hurts.

Baton Rouge, La., March 26.—William G. Purvis, the young Chicago aviator who was injured here several weeks ago in making a trial flight in a Gates biplane, will succumb to his injuries, according to the attending physicians. The mother of the young man was advised tonight by telegraph of Purvis' condition.

A Polite Concession.

(From The Washington Star.)

"You will admit that the democrats have been right sometimes."

"Yes," replied the strict parisan. "Through force of circumstances they have occasionally voted with the republicans."

ONE BALE PER ACRE.

D. P. Coogle, Oglethorpe, Ga.—I have had me some fertilizers made up as follows and will very much appreciate it if you will kindly advise me, using the inclosed stamped envelope, what it will analyze, viz:

1,000 pounds 16 per cent acid.
666 pounds 7½ per cent cotton seed meal.
334 pounds 12 per cent kainit.

In replying I wish you would also kindly advise me as to how much of this formula you would recommend in order to make a bale of cotton to the acre on ordinary land, sandy with clay subsoil, where I have heretofore only been making a bale to about three acres. Would also be glad to know your suggestions as to putting it down, whether all at one time or at different times, and when.

Answer—The mixture stated would analyze about 8.75—2.08—2.42. I cannot say how much of such a mixture would be required to produce such an increase in the yield as would make up a bale per acre. Under ordinary circumstances and with average conditions you might safely count on an increase in the yield of 75 to 100 pounds of seed cotton per each 100 pounds of fertilizer. This would mean in your case not less than 1,000 pounds per acre. This amount I would put in the ground and bed on a week or two before planting time, dividing the total amount between the bedding furrow and one or both the listing furrows. Apply 25 to 30 pounds of nitrate of soda with the seed at planting.

FERTILIZING COTTON.

R. L. J., Roanoke, Ala.—I have 15 acres of upland that have been in cotton for several years. It is dark mulatto loamy land with a red clay subsoil. How can I make it fruit well? It makes a weed 3 and 4 feet high. I intend to mix one ton of 10—2—2 meal goods and one ton of 16 per cent acid and put in when I plant and put one ton of 10—3—3 around it at the second plowing. How do you like that? Do you think I will get the fruit with that? I have the land prepared fairly well.

2. I have 15 acres that was sowed in oats and followed with peas last year; it is gray land with a clay subsoil and the peas were cut off for hay and the stubble was turned under with a two-horse subsoil in the early spring; and please tell me what is the best fertilizers to use for this, and how much.

Answer—I think the 10—2—2 guano would answer without the other two. By using one ton each of 10—2—2, 16 per cent acid, and 10—3—3 you would get a mixture that would analyze about 12—1.66—1.66, which is considerably richer in phosphoric acid than is a 10—2—2, and possibly might do better, but I doubt it. But I do not see the good reason for putting the three different kinds in the ground successively commencing with the planting. My carefully conducted experiments at the stations (and confirmed by other stations) did not result in favor of intercultural applications, nor in favor of putting all the fertilizer in with the planting seed, but showed very conclusively that acid phosphates, cotton seed meal, fish guano, blood guano, potash salts, etc., should be bedded on at least a week or two before planting. Nitrate of soda may (and should be) applied in small quantity at planting, say 25 to 40 pounds per acre, and often to profit along as late as June 22 to 30. I have persistently advised this course for "years and years" and have seen no reason to modify, except to concede that when very large amounts are to be applied—around 1,500 to 2,000 pounds per acre—it may be expedient to apply a portion interculturally. Use a 10—3—3 on the 15 acres, say 500 to 600 pounds per acre.

COTTON DOES NOT FRUIT WELL.

F. M. A., Meigs, Ga.—My land makes fine corn and makes large enough cotton weed, but doesn't fruit very full. It is sandy land. Please give me a formula of fertilizer to make it fruit. The cotton leaves begin to turn speckle in July and August and drop off and the unmatured fruit begins to fall off. Please tell me the cause and give me a remedy for it. Which is the best, to plant soon or wait late? I am using this year, per acre, 200 pounds, 14 per cent acid, 100 pounds cotton seed meal; 30 pounds muriate potash. Is it suitable or not?

Answer—I have very often prescribed proper fertilization for a soil that produces a vigorous weed, but does not fruit well. It is evidently unusually deficient in nitrogen and possibly also potash. Your proposed formula of 200 pounds 14 per cent acid, 100 pounds cotton seed meal and 30 pounds of muriate of potash would analyze about 9.00—2.12—5.00, should answer very well for cotton on the sandy soils of Thomas county. I believe I would substitute 120 pounds of kainit in place of the 30 pounds of muriate. This would bring down the grade of the mixture, but would preserve the same proportions. I am afraid you do not apply enough of the fertilizer. If you shall substitute the kainit as suggested, I would apply about 600 pounds per acre and bed on it now as soon as possible. I also would apply about 25 pounds of nitrate of soda per acre in the furrow with the seed or on top of the just covered seed. Plant neither very early nor very late and use the best seed you can get.

NITRATE ON HIGHLY IMPROVED SOIL.

J. P., Newnan, Ga.—Please inform me when to put nitrate of soda on plat that has been brought up by scattering stable manure and guano highly for three years. I broke up plat with large two-horse turn plow and followed behind with 3½-inch scooter; afterwards harrowed it; put oats in drill with a distributer; put about three bushels of oats per acre, and 600 pounds blood guano, 10—2—2. By advising you will greatly oblige me, as I want to make large amount per acre. They are looking fine, 4 or 5 inches high and spreading nicely.

Answer—If you had read with care Farm and Farmers' Department, on page 10, issue of March 13, first article under head of "Nitrate of Oats," you would have found your question answered as to time. You indicate that the land has already been brought into high condition by the use of liberal quantities of stable manure and guano for three years, and it may be that the oats do not need any more nitrogen than what was contained in the 600 pounds of blood guano. Of that you must be the judge. If your oats have broad, dark green blades an dare in vigorous growing state I doubt if another dose of nitrogen would increase the yield of grain and would be likely to cause a rank growth of straw and induce them to "bed" badly. Fifty pounds of nitrate might not be inexpedient. But, as already stated, you must judge for yourself. I would be glad to have you report the results of your crop. You do not say when you sowed the oats, but I presume last fall.

ONE VS. TWO PLANTS IN A HILL.

G. G. G., Newnan, Ga.—We have oats sowed last November in drills using 400 to 500 pounds per acre of your formula No. 8 (6.85-3.50-5.75) that are looking fine, do not show the need of nitrate soda as yet, but as soon as they do we will get busy. Would it do to run some kind of cultivator over them and would it benefit them?

Some one claims that in spacing his cotton he left his rows five feet wide with two stalks in a hill 2 1-2 feet apart, he made a gain of from 5 to 10 per cent more cotton than by leaving one stalk. What experience, if any, have you with his way of leaving two stalks to a hill? We will space our 5 foot rows and 2 1-2 feet, leaving one stalk in a place.

Would you advise sowing oats instead of rye in cotton in August as a cover crop? This cotton is being fertilized with 1,000 pounds per acre of 10-5-3 goods, the land broke 12 to 14 inches deep. We thought if didn't get killed we might get a good crop of oats (which are more valuable than rye) and if they were killed we could plow under as a cover crop.

Answer: Some farmers claim benefit from interillage of open furrow oats. I have myself believed that cross-harrowing with a light implement, such as a weeder, is an advantage early in March.

During my directorship of the Georgia Experiment station, covering a period of 17 years, nothing was more clearly proven than the proposition that a larger yield of cotton will result from having the stalks one in a place as nearly "on a square" as economy of cultivation (including planting and seed) will permit. For a period of five successive years of this experiment on different soil every year, the average yield of plants, one in a place, 3x2ft, was 1,924 pounds of seed cotton; when 4ft by 2 1-2 feet, 1778 pounds; when 5ft by 1.2 ft., 1741 pounds, and when 6 ft. by 1, 1612 pounds. In each case there were just six square feet to each stalk, which allowed 7,260 stalks per acre. In every year it was found easier to maintain an approximately full stand the nearer the space assigned to each plant approached a perfect square.

For illustration, taking the average number of plants maintained, on each series of plats during the five years, the showing was as follows:

The 3x2 plats, 7,062 plants per acre (actual count.)

The 4x1 1-2 plats, 6,708 plants per acre, (actual count.)

The 5x1.2 plats, 6,141 plants per acre (actual count.)

The 6x1 plats, 5,841 plants per acre (actual count.)

In 1899 and repeated in 1900, I planted in competition alternate plats of cotton, 4 ft. by 1 1-2 ft., 1 stalk in a place, and 4 ft. by 3 ft., 2 stalks in a place, requiring for a perfect stand in each case 7,280 stalks per acre. The following were the average results of the two years' experiments:

4ft.x1.5 ft., one stalk in a place, 1,227 lbs of seed cotton per acre.

4 ft.x3 ft., two stalks in a place, 1,112 lbs. of seed cotton per acre.

The number of stalks maintained by actual count on the 4ft.x1.5ft. plats was 6,466 per acre. On the 4ft.x3ft. plats the number of stalks was 5,816.

A 10-5-3 formula would be good for corn but a 10-3-3 formula carries enough nitrogen for cotton. I prefer rye as a cover crop, sowing in cotton, as hardier and making more growth than oats.

STIFLE JOINT.

J. W. H., Rayle, Ga.—I have a mule colt 14 months old and just before Christmas she got down in stable and in trying to get up she got her hind leg out of place at the stifle joint, and she hasn't put that foot to the ground since. You can pull it to the ground, but she can't walk on it. She plays and jumps on three legs and can lie down and get up as quick as any mule. Please tell me is there any way to get her leg back in place so she will be all right and walk on it? Could be pulled back to place now or could it be cured in any way?

Answer—It does not clearly appear just what is the condition of your colt's leg. In the condition called "stifled" the leg is stretched out straight to the rear and it is impossible for the animal to flex (bend) it and bring it forward to its usual position. The patella (or kneecap), the round loose bone that lies immediately in front of the stifle joint, should be located, that is, ascertain in what position it is with reference to the joint. It may be it has slipped around to the inside next to the body. Slip a rope round under the fetlock and pull the leg forcibly forward. This will tend to loosen the tendons and ligaments and permit the patella to be forced into its proper position in front of the stifle joint. If successful in replacing the patella, then keep the colt in a loose box stall, apply hot water fomentations several times a day. Follow each fomentation with a good liniment, well rubbed in. Possibly a blister rubbed on the front and outside of the joint and repeated as it gets well for some weeks may tone up the tissues so as to hold the patella in its proper place. If the patella has slipped to the inside it is because the ligaments that should hold it have been ruptured and the case is hopeless.

CORN—"THE LARGEST POSSIBLE YIELD."

E. G. Neal, Bohler, Ga.—My Savannah river bottom land is broken about 7 or 8 inches deep with a two-horse plow. It makes a good-sized stalk. I want to make the largest possible yield per acre this year, and I should be pleased to have you tell me when and how to plant, the kind, grade and amount of fertilizer to use, the kind of corn to plant and the methods of cultivation.

I wish to know the same about dark sandy land with clay subsoil.

Would it pay me to plant velvet beans and soy beans twenty-five miles above Augusta, Ga., on the Savannah river?. If so, when and how planted, fertilized and cultivated?

Answer.—I cannot do better than to refer you to my reply to a similar question published in the Tri-Weekly of March 6, and suggest that you follow the suggestions therein given in the main. I take it that you mean what you say when you write, "I want to make the largest possible yield per acre." Now the "largest possible yield" of course is not necessarily a profitable yield, and in many cases such a yield would be less profitable than a smaller. Let me quote a sentence in my reply above referred to: "I cannot say how much the yield would be. No man may, with any more certainty than a guess carries with it. I believe in securing large yields, but the part of true wisdom is to increase the general average yield of the entire crop area by up-to-date methods—a regular system, including rotation of crops, begins, small grain, home-raised manures in connection with a judicious and even liberal use of concentrated fertilizers, deep and thorough preparation, high grade seed, rapid cultivation."

The same methods, both of preparation, fertilibers and cultivation apply to both kinds of land.

Soybeans—even the late varieties—will succeed wherever cotton will succeed. Plant just as you would cowpeas—preferably in drills. Velvet beans are of doubtful expediency so far north as 25 miles above Augusta.

SOYBEANS.

W. M. E., Guitman, Ga.—I have not seen any thing said about soybeans lately in The Constitution.

I have one peck of mammoth yellow soja bean. I want to plant for hog and cow pasture. I want to plant for corn. I understand they don't stay in the pod like the velvet bean. I want to plant so as they will be ready for pasture when I gather the corn, in October. When should I plant them and how long will it take them to mature after planting. I understand my beans are an early variety.

Answer.—The mammoth yellow is a standard variety of soybean and is the most popular in the South, but it is not an early variety, but, on the contrary, is a late one, requiring about 130 days to mature from date of planting to ripe beans. It is a peculiarity of all varieties of soybeans to shed the seeds very soon after the pods are thoroughly dry, especially if the weather is dry and hot.

I have not heard of any satisfactory results from planting soybeans in corn. If you adopt that plan you should have your corn rows at least 5 feet apart and plant your beans in rows in the middle about the middle of June. Your ordinary field corn should be ready to crib by September 15 to 20, or in 6 to 6½ months from planting. Why not plant your soybeans after oats in June? If you have no oats sown, why?

NITRATE DOES NOT EXHAUST THE SOIL.

D. D., Georgiana, Ala.—There's a rumor going in this country that nitrate of soda if used on the same land three years in succession will exhaust the soil so as it will not produce anything on the fourth year with or without fertilizing. I am aware that you are familiar with all the effects that nitrate of soda has on soil and crops; also as you have been recommending its use for the past ten or twelve years. Any advice from you on the subject would be much appreciated.

Answer—Don't be afraid of nitrate of soda, which is among the purest and least injurious of fertilizers. If a farmer should use nothing but nitrate of soda (surely no one would be so unwise as to do that) the soil would soon fail to respond to its application and would grow poorer every year just as if no nitrate were used. But nitrate of soda is not of itself harmful in the least. If you should feed a child or a pig or any animal on nothing but sugar it would die in a few weeks, but it would not be the fault of the sugar, but because the sugar did not supply the necessary ingredients for producing healthy growth and continuing life. So with nitrate of soda, it supplies only nitrogen and soda—no phosphoric acid nor potash.

LICE ON VINES AND BUGS ON POTATOES.

To R. E. Jordan, Pinehurst, Ga.—For the lice on your grape vines (or on any other plant) make a decoction of 1 pound of tobacco (or tobacco stems) in 1 gallon of boiling water. Let it cool and strain it. Then spray the lice-infested vines (or other plants) or dip the vines under the liquid. Two or more applications may be necessary. Plant lice do not develop into "worms or caterpillars," these belonging to an entirely different family. Spray the vines (also potato bugs) with a Paris green suspension consisting of 5 ounces of Paris green, 6 pounds of quick lime and 50 gallons of water. Slake the lime in enough of the water to cover it; strain it and stir in the Paris green and stir frequently while using. Or you may mix 8 ounces of Paris green with 15 pounds of air-slaked lime and dust it on for caterpillars and potato bugs. Wash the sizing out of a 25-pound flour sack and put the dry mixture in it and shake it over the infested vines to destroy leaf-chewing insects and bugs.

SWEENEY, PROBABLY, OF HORSE.

George S. C., Stevens Pottery, Ga.—I have a mare about 11 years old. It seems as if her shoulders have perished away. When stopped she will stretch out her legs as far as she can. When driven hard she seems to get stiff in her shoulders. Please advise a remedy; also state the cause of her condition.

Answer—Your mare probably has sweeney. The "first aid" is complete rest, otherwise it may require several months to cure her. Mix into an ointment one part of cantharides and six parts of vaseline and rub a little of it into the shrunken places. Let it remain twenty-four hours (tie up her head), then wash off and grease with clean lard. Repeat the blister every two weeks and don't use her until she is no longer lame.

ANALYSIS OF FERTILIZER.

W. G. Robertson, Weltumpka, Ala.: I am thinking of using on my old sandy land for cotton: 1,000 pounds cotton seed meal, 700 pounds 16 per cent phosphate ,300 pounds kainit. Will not this analyze 6.85 phosphoric acid, 2.85 nitrogen, 2.55 potash? I am thinking of putting to this formula 125 pounds of nitrate of soda, or would I get quicker results from the nitrate of soda by putting the 25 pounds just after planting on top of the beds? Would this be a good fertiliser for corn? Does our sandy uplands need much potash, or do we use too much potash? What is the amonia in the formula?

Answer—A mixture of 1,000 pounds C. S. meal, 700 pounds of 16 per cent acid and 385 pounds of kanit would analyze according to the grade of C. S. meal. Assuming that your meal is what is called "standard" meal (2—6.20—1.20), and the kanit 12 per cent (usual) the analysis would be about 6.60—3.10 N.—2.40, which is practically of the same relative proportion as your figures. If you add 125 pounds of nitrate I think it would be wise to reduce the C. S. meal to not over 450 pounds, as the 3.10 is rather too much, as it is for the 6.60 of phosphoric acid. Yes, put 25 pounds nitrate in the furrow with the seed, or on top of the covered seed, whichever may be most convenient, and the remainder at first or second planting, but not later than June 20 or July 1.

FERTILIZER FOR CORN ON RICH BOTTOM.

G. T. McE., Talladega, Ala: I notice you recommend 1,000 pounds 16 per cent acid phosphate, 1,200 pounds 8 per cent meal and 40 pounds muriate with 100 pounds nitrate of soda as a top dressing; 1,000 pounds per acre to be "listed," on and in the second furrow. I would like to know how to prevent too much stalk with this mixture. I have land that makes stalks 15 feet to 18 feet in height and want to make over 200 bushels per acre. The soil is dark, loamy, creek bottom, well drained; has been in a pasture for seven years; Johnson grass and lespedesa the growth. Have broadcasted two tons stable manure per acre and disked the land; will broadcast one ton of 16 per cent acid phosphate o and disk with four mules. I intend to "lay off" 4-foot rows with two-horse subsoil and plant Marlboro corn. f the corn shows need of nitrogen will supply with nitrate of soda. I have made on this land 90 bushels corn. What change do you suggest?

Answer—I have often advised that where a soil is known to induce a too luxuriant growth of "weed" and fails to produce a corresponding yield of grain, or seed cotton, that the fact of such failure is due to an excess of nitrogen in the soil, or, what amounts to the same thing, a deficiency of phosphoric acid. In such cases I have long advised that the cotton seed meal, or whatever ingredient is used to supply nitrogen, should be reduced in amount, more or less, according to the farmer's judgment. So I would cut down the meal to one-half the amount, or less. This course was advised in the article on "Fertilizer Formulas" in the issue of The Constitution of January 9. Such land does not need stable manue and its use only aggravates the trouble. It is probable that it would be well to ues no cotton seed meal, and no nitrate of soda. If the land will make 95 bushels of corn without fertilizers you have little cause for complaint.

ADVERTISING TALKS.

ADVERTISING COPY WRITER, one who understands human nature and can, therefore, write HUMAN INTEREST advertising.

Some of the best advertising copy writers I know are men who have had a newspaper training. They have been brought into such close contact with the people that they know their likes and dislikes, and for that reason are able to write advertising copy to interest them.

Don't you suppose that ARTHUR BRISBANE is able to write a good advertisement?

Don't you think that SAMUEL G. BLYTHE could write fine advertising copy?

Could not JAMES CREELMAN put human interest into advertisements?

I mention these men because they are great newspaper writers.

An able newspaper reporter, with a business head, generally knows how to write a good advertisement as well as a good news story.

Every business house that advertises should be willing to expend at least FIFTEEN PER CENT OF THEIR TOTAL ADVERTISING INVESTMENT in the maintenance of a good copy department.

If a house spends $30,000 a year in advertising, they should be willing to allow at least $4,500 a year for its advertising department.

People today READ ADVERTISEMENTS CAREFULLY and with interest, and it is important to supply them with good advertising literature—good advertising news.

CHINESE ROMANCE ENDED BY THE DEATH OF LOVERS

A lover of a royal princess, an honored soldier in the army of the Chinese emperor, Jin Sing, an exile from his native land, under sentence of death there, died of a broken heart Saturday night in this city, still longing for his native land and the princess for love of whom he had been forced to leave the Land of the Sunflower.

When a young man, he was one of the soldiers in the imperial court. Young, handsome, and blessed with winning manners, he saw and fell in love with a princess of the court.

All went well with the lovers for a short time, then a whisper passed through the palace. Finally the emperor was informed.

An order was issued to put the princess under close guard, and to arrest the soldier. The girl was locked in the women's quarters, but she managed to pass word to her maid, and the girl informed Jin Sing of his peril.

Instead of fleeing at once, the lover concealed himself in the palace. A friend on guard at the door of the princess' apartment gave him his longed-for chance, and he entered to bid her a last farewell. Promising to meet in America if escape ever became possible, the princess at last forced him to leave.

Two nights later Jin Sing was on his way to America. He landed in San Francisco, waited there two years for a message from his beloved; then, writing to the soldier who had given him the opportunity to tell the princess goodby, he gave his future address as Athens, Ga.

In Athens, he worked as a laundryman.

He was quiet and unassuming, though there was a constant longing to see his native country and his princess. He made but few friends, and, until the guard who had been at the princess' door on the day Jin Sing last saw his beloved arrived in America a few years ago and announced the death of the girl, no one knew his history.

From that day his health began to fail. Three years ago, having acquired a fortune, dying from a broken heart, longing for a place at least resembling the land he loved, Jin Sing began searching the country over.

Tired, despairing of discovering the place, he came to Atlanta a few weeks ago. Stopping with a friend at 46½ East Hunter street, he appeared to be in the same state of health that he had been bearing since learning the tragic news of his beloved's death. At last, giving up suddenly, he dropped dead Saturday night from heart failure, the coroner said, though his friend shakes his head and tells of the princess and their unfortunate love.

Jin Sing's body was taken to Harry G. Poole's chapel, where the funeral will be held today at 12 o'clock. The interment will be at West View.

established in Boston, New York, Philadelphia, Chicago, St. Louis, Omaha, St. Paul and Cincinnati. Through matter that can be handled in carload lots will be sent through the weighing section by freight and such additional distribution as is necessary before the matter is delivered to other railway postoffice lines will be done at the terminals. Arrangements will be made with the publishers for a finer separation in the publishing offices and for an earlier mailing of their matter so that the slower method of transportation may not affect the regularity or promptness of its delivery.

To Effect Economies.

"We expect," said Mr. Hitchcock, "to effect considerable economies, not only in the actual cost of transportation of the matter, but also in the railway postoffice car pay, in the section that is now being weighed, and as the other sections are weighed and the plans adjusted to them, the aggregate savings to the government will be very large."

The Cost of Living.

I.
Economy's a dying art
For all who in the city dwell;
The cost of life there broke my heart,
And broke me other ways as well.

II.
A country inn I hunted down,
A place I thought I could afford,
But when they heard I came from town
The natives raised the price of board.

III.
To tropic climes I made a dash,
But Yankee industry had come;
It took away my ready cash,
And left me hollow as a drum.

IV.
I made the frozen North my goal,
In hopes to find things cheaper there,
But Peary's journey to the Pole
Advanced the price of polar bear.

V.
And now I have a single thought,—
To dwell on some uncharted isle,
Till fishes charge for being caught,
And birds have learned to make their pile.
